

Clues to Meaning & Pronunciation in References

You can use resources to help you figure out what a word means and how to pronounce it. You can use resources such as a dictionary, thesaurus, and glossary. Here is a dictionary entry for the word brilliant. Note the parts of the dictionary entry.

JUST SO YOU KNOW

Dictionary entries might have slightly different parts and slightly different appearances in different dictionaries.

brilliant adj. (br-ll' yant) 1. having strong color: The flower was a brilliant purple. 2. having a bright shine: The brilliant star twinkled. 1. worded: The singer gave a brilliant show. 4. extremely intelligent: The brilliant scientist worked on the space station.

word: brilliant

how you say the word: (br-ll' yant)

the kind of word: adj.

a meaning of the word: 1. having strong color: a sentence that shows the meaning: The flower was a brilliant purple.

You Can Do This!

1. What part of speech is the word brilliant?
2. Write the part of the dictionary entry that shows how to pronounce the word brilliant.
3. Say the word brilliant.
4. Write the meaning of brilliant that is correct in the sentence below.
We saw the brilliant sunlight on the ocean waves.

FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE

When you read, you might find groups of words that mean more than just the words themselves. This type of language is called figurative language. Check details in the sentence to help you see the words, and check details in nearby text. This will help you figure out what the words mean.

Similes & Metaphors

Similes and metaphors compare things or ideas. A simile includes the word like in the word as. A metaphor does not.

Simile: The comet is like a shining star in the circus.

Metaphor: The comet is a shining star in the circus.

Of course, the comet is not a star that shines. And the author could have simply written this sentence: The comet is important to the circus.

The author uses figurative language to show the reader how very important the comet is. It has makes the sentence clearer and more interesting. The figurative language helps readers paint word pictures in their minds as they "see" what the author means. Here's another example.

Metaphor: The comet was a rocket racing toward the top of the tent.

Simile: The comet slipped as fast as a rocket racing upward.

Of course, the comet was not really a rocket. And the author could have just written this sentence: The comet slipped high.

Again, the author uses figurative language to help readers paint word pictures in their minds. The figurative language is interesting and clear and it helps readers understand just how high the comet jumped.

You Can Do This!

Tell whether each sentence includes a metaphor or a simile. Then explain the meaning of the sentence.

1. My brother is a walking dictionary.
2. The baby is as quiet as a button.
3. His hands felt like ice when he held the cone in front the snowman.
4. My cousin is a snail when it comes to getting ready to come to my house.

Idioms

Idioms are groups of words that mean more than just the words themselves. You can tell this when you're reading. Use nearby text, as well as resources such as dictionaries, to figure out the meaning of an idiom that is new to you. Once you have learned the meaning of an idiom, you'll know the meaning of the idiom when you see it in the future.

EX: Ahmed decided to throw his hat in the ring when it was time to choose class officers.

You know that Ahmed didn't really take off his hat and throw it in a ring. You can tell this group of words means more than the words themselves. Nearby text helps you understand that Ahmed decided to run for the position of a class officer. There are more common idioms.

EX:

When the power went out, everyone in the neighborhood was in the same boat.
He was so greedy that I would tell he'd gotten up on the wrong side of the bed.
The gardener had a green thumb, so his garden was filled with flowers.

Adages & Proverbs

Adages and proverbs are wise, useful statements that can be applied in many situations. Most people use the word saying and the word proverb to name the same thing. When authors include adages and proverbs, they often include them at the end of a book. Thinking about the entire text will help you better understand what an adage or proverb means. You can also look up the meaning in print and online resources. You've seen proverbs to help you've read throughout your years in school.

EX:

Behave with this sorry.
A penny saved is a penny earned.
The early bird catches the worm.

You Can Do This!

Write a very short story to show the meaning of each proverb.

1. Don't put off until tomorrow what you can do today.
2. A penny saved is a penny earned.

Synonyms & Antonyms

Your knowledge of synonyms and antonyms can help you understand and enjoy the texts you read. This knowledge can also help you add to your vocabulary. You can find synonyms in a thesaurus. A thesaurus will sometimes also list antonyms. Dictionaries also often include synonyms and antonyms.

- Synonyms are words that have the same, or almost the same, meaning. Some examples are: alter/change, demand/ask, produce/make.
- Antonyms are words that have opposite meanings. Some examples are: absent/present, soak/dry, oppose/support.

JUST SO YOU KNOW

To be synonyms or antonyms, words must be the same part of speech.

You Can Do This!

Read each sentence. Write the bold word and its antonym from the sentence. Then explain how knowing the antonym for the bold word helps you understand the bold word's meaning.

1. My younger brother's fish is real, but his dancing dragon is imaginary.
2. The soccer players turned their weaknesses into strengths by practicing every day.

TOPIC WORDS

You often read about topics related to science, social studies, and other subjects in school. You can learn new vocabulary when you read about these topics. And you can make lists of words you find—words that will help you better understand and write about these topics in the future. You will often find illustrations with labels when you read about these topics. These resources can also help you understand the new words.

EX:

Science plants

photosynthesis: the process of using the Sun's energy to make sugar needed for a plant to survive explosion: the process of breaking down food so it can be used by a plant transpiration: the process of water traveling through a plant and then evaporating when released from a plant's leaves

You might want to make flash cards with illustrations and definitions as you read new topic words. Then you can put these flash cards into groups and use them later.

You Can Do This!

Choose a topic you have studied this year in science or social studies. Make a list of words that are important to the topic. Then write the definitions of each word.
