English News Writing Bryce Telfer McIntyre, 1996 English News Writing is a professional writer's handbook for newspaper reporters, magazine freelancers and journalism students who write in English. The focus is on writing rather than reporting. There is a thorough treatment of style usage and the many structures of news stories as well as dozens of tips on how writers can improve their work. Specifically, the book includes thorough discussions of interviewing techniques, the inverted pyramid, speech coverage, feature writing, reporting on trends, reporting on public opinion polls, using social indicators to develop news stories, writing criticism, writing personality profiles, narrative styles of writing, question and answer stories, and the jargon of the journalism profession. Examples of news structures are annotated. The book also includes 42 Rules of Thumb that serve as a quick reference for reporters to improve their work.      Language Change in English

Newspaper Editorials Ingrid Westin, 2016-08-09 This work is a corpus-based study of the language of English up-market quality newspaper editorials covering the period 1900-1993. CENE, the Corpus of English Newspaper Editorials, was compiled for the purposes of this study and comprises editorials from the Daily Telegraph, the Guardian, and The Times, chosen to represent periods at ten-year intervals. The language of the editorials was investigated with regard to features that previous research had proved to be markers of such types of discourse as might be of interest to an investigation of the development of the language of newspaper editorials. To begin with, sets of features associated with the empirically defined dimensions of linguistic variation presented in Biber (1988) were compared across decades and newspapers; these dimensions included personal involvement and information density, narrative discourse, argumentative discourse, abstract discourse, and explicit reference. However, since the study showed that the features within each set often developed in diverging directions, the old sets were broken up and new ones formed on the basis of change and continuity as well as of shared linguistic stylistic functions specific for newspaper editorials among the features involved. It then became apparent that during the 20th century the language of the editorials developed towards greater information density and lexical specificity and diversity, but at the same time towards greater informality in so far as the use of conversational features increased. The narrative quality of the editorials at the beginning of the century gradually decreased, whereas their reporting and argumentative functions remained the same over the years. When the features were compared across the newspapers analyzed, a clear distinction was noticed between The Times and the Guardian. The language of the Guardian was the most informal and the most narrative, while that of The Times was the least so. The information density was the highest in The Times and the lowest in the Guardian. In these respects, the Daily Telegraph took an intermediate position. The editorials of the Guardian were more argumentative than those of both the Daily Telegraph and The Times. As regards lexical specificity and diversity as well as sentence complexity, the Daily Telegraph scored the highest and The Times the lowest, while the results obtained for the Guardian were in between.

The English Newspaper Reader, 1908 The News Revolution in England C. John Sommerville, 1996-09-05 The News Revolution in England Cultural Dynamics of Daily Information is the first book to analyze the essential feature of periodical media which is their periodicity Having to sell the next issue as well as the present one changes the relation between authors and readers or customers and subtly shapes the way that everything is reported whether politics the arts and science or social issues So there are certain biases that are implicit in the dynamics of news production or commodified information quite apart from the intentions of journalists With the birth of the commercial periodical in late seventeenth century England news became a commodity What constituted news how it was presented and received and how people responded to it underwent a fundamental change Rather than any democratic print revolution in which the masses suddenly had access to cheap and accessible information C John Sommerville shows that the arrival of the commercial press was in fact restrictive dictating what was discussed and ultimately how it was discussed The News Revolution in England looks at the history of journalism from an entirely different angle the effect of the medium rather than the intentions of the journalists It will be of interest to historians of England journalism and news along with anyone interested in how the media shapes our Early Modern English News Discourse Andreas H. Jucker,2009-05-20 In Early Modern Britain new publication channels were developed and new textual genres established themselves News discourse became increasingly more important and reached wider audiences with pamphlets as the first real mass media Newspapers appeared first on a weekly and then on a daily basis And scientific news discourse in the form of letters exchanged between fellow scholars turned into academic journals The papers in this volume provide state of the art analyses of these developments The first part of the volume contains studies of early newspapers that range from reports of crime and punishment to want ads and from traces of religious language in early newspapers to the use of imperatives The second part is devoted to pamphlets and provides detailed analyses of news reporting and of impoliteness strategies The last section is devoted to scientific news discourse and traces the early publication formats in their various manifestations      English by Newspaper Terry L.
