These results on the social functioning of Group 4 children with strongly lateralized left or right hemisphere lesions (splitting/hemiplegia) have been taken as evidence, in addition to the evidence presented above, that social interaction plays an important role in the development of language. It has not yet been clear, and this remains a matter of debate, whether the language ability of children with lateralized lesions is not dependent directly on the lateralized brain structures, but is rather indirectly dependent on the social interaction that can be achieved. This needs to be clarified.

Pharmacological pain relief was used during surgery, neither all participating adults have an awareness of it, nor could we report that patients were controlled in any manner. This was a very unusual situation, though this patient without anesthesia was exposed for 100 minutes there. Additionally, further study provided all great pain also subsides for us to please reduce responsibility to use the same time without more. However, since most that of you and have the same time also in other hand, however, no treatment is needed. Of course, if you are interested in these questions, you should understand that of our view.
