Mapping cultural policies of the Small Island Development States UNESCO, 2024-05-23 Building Resilience to Climate Change in Small Island Developing States (SIDS) in the Caribbean C. D. Metcalfe, Erin R.

Bennett, 2023-08-25 This book summarizes approaches that integrate the environmental economic and physical domains with the values and needs of the population are necessary to develop sustainable strategies that will enhance the resilience of small islands within the context of inter island differences in geology ecology societal attitudes governance and human and economic resources The impacts of coastal damage and flooding are predicted to worsen during this century due to rising sea levels and increases in the frequency and intensity of storms The usual approach to coastal protection in Small Island Developing States SIDS in the Caribbean is to view both the hazards and the solutions from the Ocean Side perspective and to react with hard engineering solutions These structural engineering approaches prevent damage and disruptions to services associated with predictable events but leave communities vulnerable to future events that do not follow historical trends Furthermore engineered structures do not adequately address the systemic nature of climate change nor account for compounding threats e.g coincidence of hurricane season and global pandemics To move from this traditional strategy for managing risks from coastal hazards we need to consider a portfolio of solutions that enhance island protection and community resilience Nature Based Solutions NBS are gaining attention as practical and cost effective approaches for mitigating climate based stressors However deployment of NBS strategies requires spatial coordination within the context of ridge to reef or integrated water resource management IWRM approaches that include the creation of conditions for social acceptance equity effective governance and financial incentives
