Brief Gestalt Therapy Gaie Houston, 2003-06-25 Anybody with the slightest interest in brief therapy should read this book Now that the initial controversy over brief therapy has begun to subside it is great to see how brief therapy works in practice Gaie Houston's book is part of a series published by SAGE which sets out to do this and hers is particularly illuminating and accessible As she points out Gestalt is better equipped than many mainstream therapies to be applied to situations with extreme time constraints because it is both flexible and it acknowledges the part that can be played by other therapies But what propels Houston's book out of the hum drum or indeed the defensive or offensive diatribes about short therapy which have appeared over the past few years is her vivid accounts of real life sessions both one to one and group which punctuate the text Amazon Review Brief Gestalt Therapy demonstrates how the Gestalt approach can be used effectively in brief interventions with clients Gestalt's distinctively integrative nature and emphasis on a highly co-operative working alliance make it particularly suited to brief work The book sets out the basic theory and principles of Gestalt and looks at each phase of the therapeutic process from initial assessment through the beginning and middle stages to the ending of the work It presents clear practical strategies for therapists to follow and in particular examines aspects of Gestalt which are especially relevant to brief work the elements of successful therapy ways of improving skills Brief Gestalt Therapy includes vignettes and detailed case studies which bring the theory alive It will contribute much to both existing literature on Gestalt therapy and also brief therapy and will be invaluable to trainee and practising Gestalt therapists Gestalt

Coaching: Right Here, Right Now Peter Bluckert, 2016-03-16 In Gestalt Coaching Peter Bluckert draws on thirty years of experience as an organization development consultant executive coach and leadership trainer to present a unique perspective on how to become a better coach using Gestalt techniques This practical guide sets out an accessible yet critical examination of the Gestalt approach and its application to the executive coaching practice Through the use of case studies from a wide range of organizational settings Bluckert shows you how to apply the principles of Gestalt practice to both one to one and team coaching The result is a rare opportunity to appreciate the power depth subtlety and impact of an approach that offers much to both novice and experienced coaches Inhibition in the process of feature binding Snehlata

Jaswal, Feature binding is the process whereby different features such as shape colour size orientation location etc are linked together to form a coherent representation of the object It is a ubiquitous physiological sequence and an essential phase in information processing for it provides the basis of mental representations which in turn are requisite for all cognitive functions It is important to realize though that binding is not an isolated process There are myriad stimuli impinging on our senses at all times vying to gain entry into our consciousness Further not only does sensory input emanate from a complex dynamic environment but it also enters a neural system that is already activated by previous inputs and is oriented towards future goals Which aspects of the momentary sensory input are selected for further processing depends as much on the state of the system as it does on the sensory input itself. Indeed, some fundamental questions one may ask about binding are whether why and how some features are selected for binding at the cost of others. The bottom up view of information processing is that the input received by the brain is processed in a largely automatic way to the higher centers in the brain. The physiological basis of binding is postulated to be either conjunctively coding neurons or synchrony among participating neural networks to encode features and out of phase neural activity to encode separate objects. But mere perceptual integration of features whether by synchrony or by specialized neurons does not even begin to capture the implication that binding results in coherent objects fundamental for further information processing. An object is not only a bundle of features. At the very least the features need to be integrated so that the object can be distinguished from other objects. This implies selection and manipulation of the basic information supplied by separate features. The top down view of information processing contends that binding is more influenced by the reentrant processes, the downward and lateral feedback to the lower areas emanating from the higher centers of the brain. Reentrant processes not only help to confirm what is correct but also resolve competition. These top down processes are linked to attention and higher cognitive functions help select relevant input. We aim to debate what happens to the irrelevant information in the process of binding. Are irrelevant features simply lost from the system over time or are they deliberately deleted? Is there any inhibitory process involved in binding? What is the empirical evidence for such a process at the behavioral level? Is such a process active and resource demanding or relatively passive and automatic? What do neuropsychological studies show? What are the physiological underpinnings of such a process? How is it incorporated in computational models to increase our understanding of the binding process? The idea is to bring together diverse views on Inhibition in Feature Binding with the ultimate aim of better understanding the process of binding and invoking informed and insightful future research. Expressive Therapies Continuum Lisa D. Hinz, 2019-08-14

Distinctive in its application as a foundational theory in the field of art therapy, this up to date second edition demonstrates how the Expressive Therapies Continuum provides a framework for the organization of assessment information, the formulation of treatment goals and the planning of art therapy interventions. In addition to the newest research supporting the uses of art in therapy, this volume offers the latest research in media properties and material interaction, the role of neuroscience in art therapy, emotion regulation and assessment with the Expressive Therapies Continuum. It provides case studies to enliven the information and offers practical suggestions for using art in many and varied therapeutic ways. Through rich clinical detail and numerous case examples, this book's easy to use format and effectiveness in teaching history and application make it an essential reference for practitioners and students alike. The Group as an Object of Desire Morris Nitsun, 2013-05-13. Why do people find it so difficult to talk openly about sex? In this original and ground breaking book, Morris Nitsun argues that desire and sexuality are key components of human experience that have been marginalized in the group psychotherapy literature. Drawing on theory from psychoanalysis, developmental psychology and sociology while keeping the group firmly in focus he creates a picture of the potential in group therapy for the most intimate narrative Highlighting current concerns about sexual identity boundary transgression and what constitutes effective psychotherapy detailed clinical illustrations cover areas such as The erotic connection The dissociation of desire The group as witness Erotic transference and counter transference Psychotherapists and all those interested in sexual development and diversity will value the challenging approach to sexuality this book offers Perception, 2007 Workshop: The Art of Creative Inquiry Warren Linds, Tony Gee, 2023-06-26 This book explores tools and techniques for creating the arts with groups It provides insights into why workshops are such an effective and relevant form of creative practice Throughout two experienced practitioners share successful principles and qualities They also include examples of workshops that explore ways of facilitating creative exploration The authors believe that underpinning any good workshop practice is an understanding of what constitutes a workshop This is a process in which the relationship between artist researcher and participant audience maker and witness is fluid It extends each individual's abilities and connects doing to learning to inquiring in a single process The book itself is a dialogue on and an investigation into this practice It fully explores the specificities of workshop practice in relation to how it engages others in arts based research Readers learn how workshops involve inquiry into six areas inquiry into subjects artistic processes skills self the world and relationships with others In the end this informed investigation helps practitioners to better reflect on their own approaches to arts based inquiry and research This in turn leads to a better understanding of how readers can use workshops for the maximum benefit of all participants both individuals and groups Psychiatry, 2 Volume Set Allan Tasman, Jerald Kay, Jeffrey A. Bruce Goldstein, 2010

Because of the ease with which we perceive many people see perception as something that just happens However even seemingly simple perceptual experiences involve complex underlying mechanisms which are often hidden from our conscious experience These mechanisms are being investigated by researchers and theorists in fields such as psychology cognitive science neuroscience computer science and philosophy A few examples of the questions posed by these investigations are What do infants perceive How does perception develop What do perceptual disorders reveal about normal functioning How can information from one sense such as hearing be affected by information from another sense such as vision How is the information from all of our senses combined to result in our perception of a coherent environment What are some practical outcomes of basic research in perception These are just a few of the questions this encyclopedia will consider as it presents a comprehensive overview of the field of perception for students researchers and professionals in psychology the cognitive sciences neuroscience and related medical disciplines such as neurology and ophthalmology The Wiley World
