use of an unprecedented number of dogs for military duties both internationally and among the British Armed Forces On the British Home Front civilians responded to calls from the British Army's War Dogs Training School and the Ministry of Aircraft Production Guard Dog Training School by donating their canine pets for military training and employment for the duration As dogs were instructed in roles with the British Army the Royal Air Force and the London Civil Defence Region the distinction between pet and trained working animal became increasingly unclear While civilians and servicemen alike continued to view military dogs as pets many also saw trained canines as human like soldiers doing their bit a depiction promulgated by both the military and the wartime press Yet historians have paid little attention to the subject In the first comprehensive scholarly account of the employment of British military and Civil Defence dogs in the Second World War Kimberly Brice O'Donnell traces the story from the belated establishment of the short lived War Dog School and the Messenger Dog Service of the First World War to the more recent employment of canines in Iraq and Afghanistan With a focus on WWII Doing their Bit examines why and how dogs were trained and employed and how humans shaped and perceived their use Using archival material O'Donnell analyzes the performance of guard military police patrol mine detection and rescue dogs in training and on operations by considering the advantages and disadvantages of canines in such roles Military and Civil Defence dogs offered a number of advantages over humans and technological equipment and the experience gained by dog trainers and handlers led to the continued employment of canines in the postwar period While the use of horses and other animals has since diminished World War II marked a turning point in the history of the British military dog ushering in the seemingly permanent training of dogs for police and military roles

On Animals David L. Clough, 2018-12-27 This book presents an authoritative and comprehensive survey of human practice in relation to other animals together with a Christian ethical analysis building on the theological account of animals which David Clough developed in On Animals Volume I Systematic Theology 2012 It argues that a Christian understanding of other animals has radical implications for their treatment by humans with the human use and abuse of non human animals for food the most urgent immediate priority Following an introduction examining the task of theological ethics in relation to non human animals and the way it relates to other accounts of animal ethics this book surveys and assesses the use humans make of other animals for food for clothing for labour as research subjects for sport and entertainment as pets or companions and human impacts on wild animals The result is both a state of the art account of what humans are doing to other animals and a persuasive argument that Christians in particular have strong faith based reasons to acknowledge the significance of the issues raised and change their practice in response
