Hungary cannot be explained on the basis of Hungarian exceptionalism but must be situated in the broader political and economic context that has shaped the development of Hungary since 1990. The form of capitalism introduced in Hungary and across the region of East and Central Europe has systematically undermined the strong state and social security that had existed under communism and when added to the failure of the left and liberals in the region it has paved the way for far right and neo fascist political movements to emerge claiming the mantle of defenders of society from the market. This represents a fundamental threat to the enlightenment traditions that have shaped dominant modern political ideologies and raises profound problems for both the EU and NATO.

Doing Business 2013 World Bank, 2012-10-23 Tenth in a series of annual reports comparing business regulation in 185 economies. Doing Business 2013 measures regulations affecting 11 areas of everyday business activity: starting a business, dealing with construction permits, getting electricity, registering property, getting credit, protecting investors, paying taxes, trading across borders, enforcing contracts, closing a business, and employing workers. The report updates all indicators as of June 1, 2012, ranks economies on their overall ease of doing business, and analyzes reforms to business regulation, identifying which economies are strengthening their business environment the most. The Doing Business reports illustrate how reforms in business regulations are being used to analyze economic outcomes for domestic entrepreneurs and for the wider economy. This year marks the tenth anniversary of the global Doing Business report. Doing Business is a flagship product by the World Bank and IFC that garners worldwide attention on regulatory barriers to entrepreneurship. More than 60 economies use the Doing Business indicators to shape reform agendas and monitor improvements on the ground. In addition, the Doing Business data has generated over 870 articles in peer reviewed academic journals since its inception.

Central Asia Regional Economic Cooperation Corridor Performance Measurement and Monitoring Asian Development Bank, 2014-11-01 This report describes how Central Asia Regional Economic Cooperation (CAREC) corridor performance measurement and monitoring (CPMM) helps to achieve the objectives of the CAREC Transport and Trade Facilitation Strategy and its Implementation Action Plan. It presents the CPMM methodology and discusses the roles and responsibilities of key stakeholders, especially the private sector. It highlights ongoing efforts to provide accurate and reliable indicators despite the challenges of measuring corridor performance in the CAREC context. The extensive depth of data collected and the richness of information that CPMM has been providing since 2009 supports detailed policy analysis and formulation. Trade facilitation indicators have been developed to inform CAREC's Development Effectiveness Review. These indicators provide a basis of comparison or benchmarking of one location, border crossing point, or corridor segment against another in terms of: i) the efficiency of border management agency policies and procedures in regulating trade; ii) infrastructure quality; and in due course iii) the quality and performance of trade logistics service providers. The four indicators include the standard measures of time and cost as the main components. Selected corridor performance data are then analyzed to identify the physical and non physical barriers to trade and transit traffic encountered at specific locations helping to pinpoint the causes of excessive delays and costs With this study ADB underscores the value of CPMM for CAREC countries and for countries participating in other subregional programs as they craft policies and consider investments to facilitate trade

Trade in Zimbabwe Richard Newfarmer,Martha Denisse Pierola,2015-05-26 In Zimbabwe trade has been a driver of economic growth rising incomes and progressive empowerment of Zimbabweans through rising standards of living and the promise of better jobs Since 1980 through good years and bad years increases in exports have been positively associated with increases in national income Zimbabwe's location and resource base together with a low cost but relatively well educated labor force have endowed it with a naturally high trade ratio built on a diversified base that facilitates using trade as an engine of growth While trade volumes have rebounded smartly from the deep recession of 2007 2008 these do not offset other worrisome longer term trends Export growth during the last decade has been lacklustre and failed to drive high growth Agricultural exports other than tobacco have lost their once dominant role in the region and are no longer a source of diversification Manufacturing has withered in a continuing secular decline Zimbabwe's export basket has become less diversified and more dependent on a narrow range of mineral and to a lesser extent agricultural products In short exports have become less diversified less technologically sophisticated and less labor intensive and ever more dependent on a few large mining activities to provide foreign exchange and employment This report traces the roots of this poor performance to several policy issues poor predictability of macroeconomic policy and economic governance has created an unfavorable climate for private investment and trade a tariff structure that dampens export profitability industrial policies indigenization policy in particular that undermine investor confidence and inhibits private investment and finally competition limiting policies toward services that limit connectivity of Zimbabweans and raise trade costs The good news arising from the study is that the remedies for these policy shortcomings lie in Zimbabwean hands If the government were to adopt reforms that reconfigure economy wide incentives and trade and industrial policies it could promote sustained growth economic diversification and empowerment of poor people

Finland International Monetary Fund. European Dept.,2014-05-28 This Selected Issues paper on Finland discusses that the country is struggling to recover from the Great Recession indicating that deeper structural issues may be holding back growth Estimates of potential output for Finland are an important part of the toolkit for policymakers but they come with a degree of uncertainty As this paper illustrates the use of different methodologies and assumptions can lead to different results However there are indications that Finnish potential output growth is low at this juncture From 1997 to 2007 potential growth independent of the choice of smoothing averages 3.2 percent per year In 2013 that average has dropped to 0.2 with several of the models producing negative growth This result indicates that the lack of a recovery in Finland is largely structural in nature Therefore any indication that the output gap is closing is due to falling potential rather than a pickup in growth This leads to the advantages of structural reforms aiming to enhance Finland's long term capacity Total factor productivity enhancing measures could be crucial in helping the economy recover despite the time it takes to implement them
