The Skills Strand

To be literate, a person must be able to decode the words on the page and then make sense of those words. The first task is made possible by decoding skills and the second by language comprehension ability. If a person cannot decode the words on the page, she will not be able to achieve literacy, no matter how much oral language and background knowledge she may have.

The Skills Strand of the Core Knowledge program teaches the mechanics of both reading and writing, i.e., how to decode and encode written English. It is based on the most current research in cognitive science on reading and writing. Learning to read and write is neither natural nor easy. Young children are most successful in acquiring the necessary decoding and encoding skills when they are explicitly and systematically taught phonics.

The Skills Strand in Grade 2 requires 60 minutes of daily instruction. Reading and writing are taught in tandem, since they are inverse processes. In Grade 2, students continue to expand their knowledge of the English code, learning to read multi-syllable words composed of the advanced code. By the end of Grade 2, students will have learned all but the very rarest letter-sound correspondences in the English language. Mastery of these letter-sound correspondences means that students have the tools they need to independently sound out and decode just about any word that they may encounter.

An important goal in second grade for all students is the development of automaticity and fluency in reading. Fluency is critical for deep reading and understanding of text. By the end of the year, students will be independently reading challenging fiction and non-fiction text, with the expectation that they will can answer literal and inferential comprehension questions about the text both orally and in writing.

In Grade 2, students also continue to learn about the structure of the English language, grammar, the parts of speech, and other language conventions. Considerable emphasis is also placed on writing instruction using a systematic writing process – Plan, Draft, Edit, and Publish. Students practice writing narratives, informative/explanatory texts and opinion pieces. At the end of the year, students will also write a brief research paper using knowledge they have acquired from their nonfiction reader about the War of 1812.
