seen as an urgent need in the Department of Defense given recent technological advances and the changing threats. Toward this end the Department of Defense established the Immune Building Program to develop protective systems to deter biological and chemical attacks on military facilities and minimize the impacts of attacks should they occur. At the request of the Defense Threat Reduction Agency the National Research Council convened a committee to provide guiding principles for protecting buildings from airborne biological or chemical threat agents and outline the variables and options to consider in designing building protection systems. This report addresses such components of building protection as building design and planning strategies, heating, ventilating, and air conditioning systems, filtration, threat detection, and identification technologies, and operational responses. It recommends that building protection systems be designed to accommodate changing building conditions, new technologies, and emerging threats. Although the report's focus is on protection of military facilities, the guiding principles it offers are applicable to protection of public facilities as well.

Expedition and Wilderness Medicine Gregory H. Bledsoe, Michael J. Manyak, David A. Townes, 2009. With an increase in visits to remote and dangerous locations around the world, the number of serious and fatal injuries and illnesses associated with these expeditions has markedly increased. Thus, so has the need for medical personnel trained specifically to handle the health risks that are faced when far removed from professional care resources. Expedition and Wilderness Medicine covers everything a prospective field physician or medical consultant needs to prepare for when beginning an expedition. Divided into three parts: Expedition Planning, Expeditions in Unique Environments, and Illness and Injuries on Expeditions, this unique book covers everything that the expedition physician needs to know.

BOOK JACKET Vaccines Stanley A. Plotkin, Walter A. Orenstein, Paul A. Offit, 2008. Completely revised and updated, this respected reference offers comprehensive and current coverage of every aspect of vaccination from development to use in reducing disease. It also includes access to a companion Web site for more coverage.

Mass Vaccination: Global Aspects - Progress and Obstacles Stanley A. Plotkin, 2006-09-21. Mass immunization is the blitzkrieg of vaccination practice. It serves to rapidly protect populations both because of the high coverage achieved and because of the herd immunity thereby induced. However, as in war, mass immunization campaigns must be conducted intelligently with careful strategy and strong attention to logistics of supply and deployment. If conducted badly, mass immunization may fail or even be counterproductive. In this volume, some of the most successful practitioners of mass immunization tell us about its art and science. David Heymann and Bruce Aylward of WHO begin the book with a theoretical and practical overview of mass immunization. Michael Lane, who participated in the successful effort to eradicate smallpox, relates how this was done using mass vaccination and other strategies. Application of mass immunization by the US military is covered by John Grabenstein and Remington Nevin, who have a large experience in these matters. Karen Noakes and David Salisbury recount the striking successes of mass immunization in the United Kingdom. The global control of the clostridia that produce diphtheria toxin is described by Charles Vitek. Hepatitis A is decreasing dramatically under the impact of large scale vaccination as Francis Andr illustrates The French experience with Hepatitis B vaccination has been mixed and Francois Denis and Daniel Levy Bruhl explain the circumstances In uenza vaccination is an annual example of large scale campaigns the complexity of which is recounted by Benjamin Schwartz and Pascale Wortley The New Public Health Theodore H.
