Mullen,2024-04-22 The Communist International's Popular Front campaign of the 1930s brought to the fore ideas that resonated in Chicago's African American community. Indeed the Popular Front not only connected to the black experience of the era but outlasted its Communist Party affiliation to serve as both model and inspiration for a postwar cultural insurrection led by African Americans. With a new preface Bill V Mullen updates his dynamic reappraisal of a critical moment in American cultural history. Mullen's study includes reassessments of the politics of Richard Wright's critical reputation and a provocative reading of class struggle in Gwendolyn Brooks' A Street in Bronzeville. He also takes an in depth look at the institutions that comprised Chicago's black popular front: the Chicago Defender, the period's leading black newspaper; Negro Story, the first magazine devoted to publishing short stories by and about African Americans; and the WPA sponsored South Side Community Art Center.

Unwilling Executioner Andrew Pepper,2016-04-08 What gives crime fiction its distinctive shape and form? What makes it such a compelling vehicle of social and political critique? Unwilling Executioner argues that the answer lies in the emerging genre's complex and intimate relationship with the bureaucratic state and modern capitalism and the contradictions that ensue once the state assumes control of the criminal justice system. This study offers a dramatic new interpretation of the genre's emergence and evolution over a three hundred year period and as a genuinely transnational phenomenon. From its roots in the tales of criminality circulated widely in Paris and London in the early eighteenth century this book examines the extraordinary richness, diversity and complexity of the genre's subsequent thematizations of crime and policing moving from France and Britain and from continental Europe and the United States to other parts of the globe. In doing so it offers new ways of reading established crime novelists like Gaboriau, Doyle, Hammett and Simenon beyond their national contexts and an impulse to characterize their work as either straightforwardly radical or conservative. It also argues for the centrality of writers like Defoe, Gay, Godwin, Vidocq, Morrison and more recently Manchette, Himes and Sjöwall and Wahl to a project where crime and policing are rooted and shown to be rooted in the social and economic conditions of their time. These are all deeply political writers even if their novels exhibit no interest in directly promoting political causes or parties. The result is an agile, layered and far reaching account of the crime story's ambivalent relationship to the justice system and its move to complicate our understanding of what crime is and how society is policed and for whose benefit.

"Born in a Mighty Bad Land" Jerry H. Bryant, 2003-04-03 The figure of the violent man in the African American imagination has a long history He can be found in 19th century bad man ballads like Stagolee and John Hardy as well as in the black convict recitations that influenced gangsta rap Born in a Mighty Bad Land connects this figure with similar characters in African American fiction Many writers McKay and Hurston in the Harlem Renaissance Wright Baldwin and Ellison in the 40s and 50s Himes in the 50s and 60s saw the bad nigger as an archetypal figure in the black imagination and psyche Blaxploitation novels in the 70s made him a virtually mythical character More recently Mosley Wideman and Morrison have presented him as ghetto philosopher and cultural adventurer Behind the folklore and fiction many theories have been proposed to explain the source of the bad man s intra racial violence Jerry H Bryant explores all of these elements in a wide ranging and illuminating look at one of the most misunderstood figures in African American culture
