Flood Hazards Jessica Lamond, Colin Booth, Felix Hammond, David Proverbs, 2011-07-28 A 360 degree view of the response to flood risk As major flooding events around the world show the impact of flooding on the built environment can cause widespread chaos These flood events form part of a wider pattern of increasing flood frequency coupled with increased vulnerability of the built environment to flood hazard Flood risk can unite o

Disaster and Development Andrew E. Collins, 2009-09-10 Development to a large extent determines the way in which hazards impact on people Meanwhile the occurrence of disasters alters the scope of development Whilst a notion of the association of disaster and development is as old as development studies itself recent decades have produced an intensifying demand for a fuller understanding Evidence of disaster and development progressing together has attracted increased institutional attention This includes recognition through global accords of a need for disaster reduction in achieving Millennium Development Goals and of sustainable development as central to disaster reduction However varied interpretations of this linkage and accessible options for future human wellbeing remain unconsolidated for most of humanity This engaging and accessible text illuminates the complexity of the relationship between disaster and development It opens with an assessment of the scope of contemporary disaster and development studies highlighting the rationale for looking at the two issues as part of the same topic The second and third chapters detail development perspectives of disaster and the influence of disaster on development The fourth chapter exemplifies how human health is both a cause and consequence of disaster and development and the following chapter illustrates some of the learning and planning processes in disaster and development oriented practice Early warning risk management mitigation response and recovery actions provide the focus for the fifth and sixth chapters The final chapter indicates some of the likely future contribution and challenges of combined disaster and development approaches With an emphasis on putting people at the centre of disaster and development the book avoids confronting readers with no hope representations instead highlighting disaster reduction opportunities This book is an essential introduction for students from multiple disciplines whose subject area may variously engage with contemporary crises and for many other people interested in finding about what is really meant by disaster reduction They include students and practitioners of development environment sociology economics public health anthropology and emergency planning amongst others It provides an entry point to a critical yet diverse topic backed up by student friendly features such as boxed case studies from the geographical areas of America to Africa and parts of Europe to parts of the East summaries discussion questions suggested further reading and web site information

Flood Risk Science and Management Gareth Pender, Hazel Faulkner, 2010-12-01 Approaches to avoid loss of life and limit disruption and damage from flooding have changed significantly in recent years Worldwide there has been a move from a strategy of flood defence to one of flood risk management Flood risk management includes flood prevention using hard defences where appropriate but also requires that society learns to live with floods and that stakeholders living in flood prone areas develop coping strategies to increase their resilience to flood impacts when these occur This change in approach represents a paradigm shift which stems from the realisation that continuing to strengthen and extend conventional flood defences is unsustainable economically environmentally and in terms of social equity Flood risk management recognises that a sustainable approach must rest on integrated measures that reduce not only the probability of flooding but also the consequences This is essential as increases in the probability of inundation are inevitable in many areas of the world due to climate change while socio economic development will lead to spiralling increases in the consequences of flooding unless land use in floodplains is carefully planned Flood Risk Science and Management provides an extensive and comprehensive synthesis of current research in flood management providing a multi disciplinary reference text covering a wide range of flood management topics Its targeted readership is the international research community from research students through to senior staff and flood management professionals such as engineers planners government officials and those with flood management responsibility in the public sector By using the concept of case study chapters international coverage is given to the topic ensuring a world wide relevance

Flood-related health risk assessment: a case study in Hoi An City, Quang Nam province, Vietnam Trinh, Thi Giao Chi, 2017-01-01 Flooding is one of the most frequent and severe disasters in Hoi An City The analysis of flood events in Hoi An revealed the impacts of flooding on many aspects of human life in this area including severe health risk However through literature review the research showed that few studies about health risk assessment were performed in Vietnam in general and in Hoi An City specifically Therefore assessment of the health risk due to flooding is conducted in this research The goal of this study is to develop a method to assess human health risk due to flooding with a focus on communicable diseases It also aims to reduce health risk due to flooding by exploring areas that are most at risk The methodology consists of i creating the health susceptibility map based on the Health Susceptibility Index HSI ii integration of health susceptibility with exposure information into vulnerability information iii spatial analysis of health risk by the combination between health vulnerability and flood hazard information iv evaluating the research results with the incidence of diseases in reality The health risk map is the first holistic map of its kind for defining the spatial distribution of risk areas in Hoi An City

Oceans and Human Health Robert E. Bowen, Michael H. Depledge, Cinnamon P. Carlarne, Lora E. Fleming, 2014-04-03 Human health and well being are tied to the vitality of the global ocean and coastal systems on which so many live and rely We engage with these extraordinary environments to enhance both our health and our well being But we need to recognize that introducing contaminants and otherwise altering

these ocean systems can harm human health and well being in significant and substantial ways These are complex challenging and critically important themes How the human relationship to the oceans evolves in coming decades may be one of the most important connections in understanding our personal and social well being Yet our understanding of this relationship is far too limited This remarkable volume brings experts from diverse disciplines and builds a workable understanding of breadth and depth of the processes both social and environmental that will help us to limit future costs and enhance the benefits of sustainable marine systems In particular the authors have developed a shared view that the global coastal environment is under threat through intensified natural resource utilization as well as changes to global climate and other environmental systems All these changes contribute individually but more importantly cumulatively to higher risks for public health and to the global burden of disease This pioneering book will be of value to advanced undergraduate and postgraduate students taking courses in public health environmental economic and policy fields Additionally the treatment of these complex systems is of essential value to the policy community responsible for these questions and to the broader audience for whom these issues are more directly connected to their own health and well being The seas across this planet and their effects on human society and its destiny are a fascinating subject for analysis and insights derived from intellectual inquiry This diverse and complex subject necessarily requires a blending of knowledge from different disciplines which the authors of this volume have achieved with remarkable success The following pages in this volume are written in a lucid and very readable style and provide a wealth of knowledge and insightful analysis which is a rare amalgam of multi disciplinary perspectives and unique lines of intellectual inquiry It is valuable to get a volume such as this which appeals as much to a non specialist reader as it does to those who are specialists in the diverse but interconnected subjects covered in this volume

Megacities and the Coast Mark Pelling, Sophie Blackburn, 2014-01-03 Based on a major international study this volume provides a synthesis of scientific knowledge on megacity urbanization on the coast environmental impacts risks and management choices including a focus on adaptation mitigation and disaster risk management It is the primary output of a major international scientific project sponsored by the International Geosphere Biosphere Programme the Land Ocean Interactions at the Coastal Zone programme of IHDP IGBP and others It brings together the work of over 60 contributing authors and an international review board It presents the international policy and academic community with an unbiased and high quality assessment of the state of the art in areas of social ecological systems interaction One of its main messages is that while we know a great deal about megacities of more than ten million people and about urban processes and about coasts and their physical and ecological processes aquatic physical and atmospheric there is relatively little work that focusses primarily at points of intersection between large scale urbanization and the coast The book responds to this gap by providing the first global synthesis of megacity and large urban region urbanization on the coast Its focus is on environmental and development challenges climate change and disaster It is interdisciplinary and brings together world recognised scientists including many IPCC lead authors on urban climate and atmosphere disaster risk management demography and coastal environments
