

mutually competitive, with an intensity that stood more to my than to an urge for dominance. These values flowed into us as the examples of Joseph and Rose Kennedy. They helped us form bonds among our mothers, and to develop personalities based on these bonds, so as women that remain to this day under appreciated by the character of my family. They remain in all. They lie at the heart of the way I wish to live.

I was nine years old in that summer of 1941, the final summer of the families' world into which I was born. I was not clear why we had all come back home from England, but I was happy that we had. I was too young to fully understand that my father had resigned his ambassadorship. I was certainly too young to comprehend that he'd resigned because he had offended some people in England by saying that the British might not be capable of fighting a war against Germany. It would have been ironic to me that Dad had disowned President Roosevelt with these same remarks. Or that when he was away from the Cape house that summer in New York and Washington, he was trying to persuade other people to join his effort at keeping America out of the war. Or that, despite their differences, Joseph Kennedy continued to support Franklin Roosevelt as president.

I just know that one weekend, he and I would ride horseback together on the Cape, and that was all I really cared to know.

It's hardly surprising that three facets of my father's life were unknownable to me as a child. If my father were alive
