onventionally, there are certain basic concepts that every beginning teacher must learn about the field and environment. However, there are many other topics that may be equally important. For example, teachers must learn how to teach students to think and to analyze information. They must also learn how to evaluate their own teaching methods and to improve them. In addition, teachers must learn how to work with parents and other professionals in the school system. These skills are essential for effective teaching.

One way to help students learn these skills is through case studies.

First Principles of Instruction M. David Merrill, 2012-10-06 This handy resource describes and illustrates the concepts underlying the First Principles of Instruction and illustrates First Principles and their application in a wide variety of instructional products. The book introduces the e3 Course Critique Checklist that can be used to evaluate existing instructional product. It also provides directions for applying this checklist and illustrates its use for a variety of different kinds of courses. The Author has also developed a Pebble in the Pond instructional design model with an accompanying e3 ID Checklist. This checklist enables instructional designers to design and develop instructional products that more adequately implement First Principles of Instruction.

The Cycle of Cosmic Catastrophes Richard Firestone, Allen West, Simon Warwick-Smith, 2006-06-05 Scientific proof validating the legends and myths of ancient floods, fires and weather extremes. Presents scientific evidence revealing the cause of the end of the last ice age and the cycles of geological events and species extinctions that followed. Connects physical data to the dramatic earth changes recounted in oral traditions around the world. Describes the impending danger from a continuing cycle of catastrophes and extinctions. There are a number of puzzling mysteries in the history of Earth that have yet to be satisfactorily explained by mainstream science: the extinction of the dinosaurs, the vanishing of ancient Indian tribes, the formation of the mysterious Carolina Bays, the disappearance of the mammoths, the sudden ending of the last Ice Age, and the cause of huge underwater landslides that sent massive tsunamis racing across the oceans millennia ago. Eyewitness accounts of these events are chronicled in rich oral traditions handed down through generations of native peoples. The authors recent scientific discoveries link all these events to a single cause. In The Cycle of Cosmic Catastrophes Richard Firestone, Allen West and Simon Warwick Smith present scientific evidence about a series of prehistoric cosmic events that explains why the last Ice Age ended so abruptly. Their findings validate the ubiquitous legends and myths of floods, fires and weather extremes passed down by our ancestors and show how these legendary events relate to each other. Their findings also support the idea that we are entering a thousand year cycle of increasing danger and possibly
