Economics of Advanced Manufacturing Systems Hamid R. Parsaei, A. Mital, 2012-12-06 The 1980s have witnessed a tremendous growth in the field of computer integrated manufacturing systems The other major areas of development have been computer aided design computer aided manufacturing industrial robotics automated assembly cellular and modular material handling computer networking and office automation to name just a few These new technologies are generally capital intensive and do not conform to traditional cost structures The net result is a tremendous change in the way costs should be estimated and economic analyses performed The majority of existing engineering economy texts still profess application of traditional analysis methods But as was mentioned above it is clear that the basic trend in manufacturing industries is itself changing So it is quite obvious that the practice of traditional economic analysis methods should change too This book is an attempt to address the various issues associated with non traditional methods for evaluation of advanced computer integrated technologies This volume consists of twenty refereed articles which are grouped into five parts Part one Economic Justification Methods consists of six articles In the first paper Soni et al present a new classification for economic justification methods for advanced automated manufacturing systems In the second Henghold and LeClair look at strengths and weaknesses of expert systems in general and more specifically an application aimed at investment justification in advanced technology The third paper by Carrasco and Lee proposes an enhanced economic methodology to improve the needs analysis conceptual design and detailed design activities associated with technology modernization Encyclopedia of Production and Manufacturing Management Paul M. Manufacturing Management is an encyclopedia that has been developed to serve this field as the fundamental reference work. Over the past twenty years the field of production and operations management has grown more rapidly than ever and consequently its boundaries have been stretched in all directions. For example in the last two decades production and manufacturing management absorbed in rapid succession several new production management concepts: manufacturing strategy, focused factory, just in time manufacturing, concurrent engineering, total quality management, supply chain management, flexible manufacturing systems, lean production and mass customization to name a few. This explosive growth makes the need for this volume abundantly clear. The manufacturing industry thinks and acts more broadly than it did several decades ago. The most notable change has been the need for manufacturing managers to think in technological, strategic and competitive terms. This is a very favorable development and it leads to manufacturing success. The entries in this encyclopedia include the most recent technical and strategic innovations in production and manufacturing management. The encyclopedia consists of articles of varying lengths. The longer articles on important concepts and practices range from five to fifteen pages. There are about 100 such articles written by nearly 100 authors from around the world. In addition there are over 1000 shorter entries on concepts, practices and principles. The range of topics and depth of coverage is intended to suit both student and professional audiences. The shorter entries provide digests of unfamiliar and complicated subjects. Difficult subjects are made intelligible to the reader without oversimplification. The strategic and technological perspectives on various topics give this Encyclopedia its distinctiveness and uniqueness. The world of manufacturing today is increasingly competitive. It is apparent that manufacturers must respond to these competitive pressures with technical and strategic innovation. This encyclopedia has been developed to help researchers, students and those in the manufacturing industry to understand and implement these ongoing changes in the field.

Project Management Jack R. Meredith,Samuel J. Mantel, Jr.,2011-08-23 As the use of project management to accomplish organisational goals continues to grow skills related to understanding human behavior evaluating organisational issues and using quantitative methods are all necessary for successful project management Meredith and Mantel have drawn from experiences in the workplace to develop a text that teaches the student how to build skills necessary for selecting initiating operating and controlling all types of projects

Mathematical Modelling J. Caldwell,Douglas K.S. Ng,2006-04-10 Over the past decade there has been an increasing demand for suitable material in the area of mathematical modelling as applied to science engineering business and management Recent developments in computer technology and related software have provided the necessary tools of increasing power and sophistication which have significant implications for the use and role of mathematical modelling in the above disciplines In the past traditional methods have relied heavily on expensive experimentation and the building of scaled models but now a more flexible and cost effective approach is available through greater use of mathematical modelling and computer simulation In particular developments in computer algebra symbolic manipulation packages and user friendly software packages for large scale problems all have important implications in both the teaching of mathematical modelling and more importantly its use in the solution of real world problems Many textbooks have been published which cover the art and techniques of modelling as well as specific mathematical modelling techniques in specialist areas within science and business In most of these books the mathematical material tends to be rather tailor made to fit in with a one or two semester course for teaching students at the undergraduate or postgraduate level usually the former This textbook is quite different in that it is intended to build on and enhance students modelling skills using a combination of case studies and projects

Transportation Decision Making Kumares C. Sinha,Samuel Labi,2011-09-09 This pioneering text provides a holistic approach to decisionmaking in transportation project development and programming whichcan help transportation professionals to optimize their investmentchoices The authors present a proven set of methodologies for evaluating transportation projects that ensures that all costs and impacts are taken into consideration. The text's logical organization gets readers started with a solid foundation in basic principles and then progressively builds on that foundation. Topics covered include: Developing performance measures for evaluation; estimating travel demand and costing transportation projects; Performing an economic efficiency evaluation that accounts for such factors as travel time, safety, and vehicle operating costs; Evaluating a project's impact on economic development and land use as well as its impact on society and culture; Assessing a project's environmental impact including air quality, noise, ecology, water resources, and aesthetics; Evaluating alternative projects on the basis of multiple performance criteria; Programming transportation investments so that resources can be optimally allocated to meet facility-specific and system-wide goals. Each chapter begins with basic definitions and concepts followed by a methodology for impact assessment. Relevant legislation is discussed and available software for performing evaluations is presented. At the end of each chapter, readers are provided resources for detailed investigation of particular topics. These include Internet sites and publications of international and domestic agencies and research institutions. The authors also provide a companion Web site that offers updates, data for analysis, and case histories of project evaluation and decision making. Given that billions of dollars are spent each year on transportation systems in the United States alone and that there is a need for thorough and rational evaluation and decision making for cost-effective system preservation and improvement, this text should be on the desks of all transportation planners, engineers, and educators. With exercises in every chapter, this text is an ideal coursebook for the subject of transportation systems analysis and evaluation. Management
