

Introduction

Intended to inspire and inform to equal measure, this book is primarily written for students of design seeking to balance real-world practice with postulate about design methods and material and manufacturing specifications for industrial production. No single approach to concept origination or design development is prescribed. Rather, the book's necessary and correct aim is to engender exposure and inclusive thinking around function, aesthetics, material selection, manufacturing and component geometry. This book also provides an insight into furniture design for those considering a tertiary education in product and industrial design.

Furniture design, as furniture is development materials and manufacturing is primarily focused on industrial design for industry and mass production for the single mass that early of furniture designers are engaged within this realm. In addition, having been not modern industrial designers need a good understanding of materials and manufacturing processes to communicate producing with engineers and already in product design or final and entire budget for a client. Furniture design is by no means an exhaustive guide to design and manufacturing but as a companion for designers to provide an insight to some elements of furniture design knowledge.

While showing a material is a manufacturing process can be a critical and objective starting point to really design more than one solution to meeting a form, structure and aesthetic requirements and supporting functions. It can be considered for supporting design students to discover that material was in reality all aspects of their design and development process, and that the designer's role is just one part of a long line of expertise that helps bring products to market.

The responses looked to ideas and functions of a final will inevitably be different, depending on the job - if you create - and the budget. The responses progress through design and material use both slowly and increasingly innovative, but these designers had very different concerns during the course of each product's development. Some items were high-end products and so could be relatively high (but not cheap). The items that is manufactured in large high volume and for the 10 table is low volume furniture. A designer would not necessarily approach the process using a graphic like the one that appears on the next page, but the reader's reactions to each kind of material is obvious in the subsequent development and thinking, consistently or otherwise, the designer is guided by such parameters.

For designers and to open, create leads the most important of professional considerations are a balance between creative freedom and well-defined constraints
