recruited to take part in one hour interviews Interviews were audio recorded transcribed and coded into categories using a general inductive approach Using the qualitative analysis software NVIVO to assist in data analysis themes and subthemes emerged Results suggested that considerable barriers exist among the representatives for supplying fresh affordable produce in Phoenix area food deserts including minimum delivery requirements beyond the needs of the average small store a desire to work with high volume customers due to transportation and production costs and the higher price point of produce for both store owners and consumers Conversely opportunities were identified that could be important in overcoming such barriers including tax or economic incentives that would make distribution into food deserts financially viable infrastructural support for the safe handling and storage of fresh foods at existing retail outlets and the development of novel distribution mechanisms for producers such as mobile markets and food hubs Future research is needed to determine if these findings are representative of a larger more diverse sample of Arizona produce supply chain representatives
