Frédéric Dufays

University of Liege – HEC Management School – Centre for Social Economy

Our contemporary society is in need of creativity and entrepreneurship for producing economic as well as social value. Observing that bridging arts and sciences both within the academy and with external partners is among the best ways to foster creativity and entrepreneurship, Lynn Book and David Phillips compile a series contributions that analyse, share experiences, model such (cross-sector) partnerships. Indeed, two conferences organised by Book concluded on the necessity to reframe creativity as inherently interdisciplinary and to consciously address this gap both in theory and practice. With this book, the editors want to contribute filling this gap in triggering transdisciplinary efforts to teach creativity. All in all, Book and Phillips' aims are to provide resources for and stimulate discussion about creativity, innovation and social entrepreneurship development.

The book is structured in three parts, each of which deals with a particular theme of creativity development. The first part explores how creativity and entrepreneurship can be integrated into higher education curricula. It focuses on the role of the academic world in shaping new collaborations and fostering action for the common good. The second part deals with the development of creativity and innovation in contexts outside higher education. Finally, the third part examines the institutional structures in which creativity and social entrepreneurship is favoured or hindered.

In Chapter 1, Lynn Book discusses how creativity, paired with entrepreneurship, can be taught in higher education to lead to transformative practices – i.e. social entrepreneurship. She introduces the concepts of critical creativity and creative engagement to account for the complexity of the creative behaviour. Following a critical analysis of her own teaching practices in liberal arts, she calls for multimodal, transdisciplinary and multicultural platforms. These should allow critical examination of the socio-cultural context as well as develop entrepreneurial innovation, which would ultimately foster critical creativity.

Liora Bresler describes Academic Intellectual Entrepreneurs (AIEs) in chapter 2. According to her, AIEs are "creative university faculty who cross intellectual and often organizational boundaries to create a product broadly conceived: high-impact research, teaching and service" (p. 18). She identifies several characteristics of these AIEs: they are passion-driven, learn experientially, generally collaborate, and have often developed innovative interdisciplinary programmes, courses, or textbooks.

Chapter 3, by Heidi LaMoreaux, provides an example of combining ideas from different disciplines to achieve something new. Indeed, she applies a model coming from natural sciences for identifying soil-forming factors to the analysis of personal history. She believes that such a scientific way of viewing the world may stimulate personal expression, help to objectivise one's beliefs and to understand identity formation.

In chapter 4, David P. Phillips calls for interdisciplinarity and describes ways to approach it to foster social entrepreneurship. He stresses the need to interact between different academic communities
