There's No Such Thing as Creativity John Baer,2022-07-07 Most people including creativity researchers act as if they believe that creativity is not simply a useful category or label but a real thing with its own essence just as Plato would argue that an ideal triangle has an essence that is shared with all actual triangles Most people including creativity researchers also believe that there is a set of general creativity relevant skills that can be applied to most problems in ways that will lead to more creative outcomes Creativity research now calls these beliefs into question A domain general misunderstanding of the nature of creativity relevant skills and the equally mistaken belief that creativity exists independently of actual creative things and ideas have together hindered creativity theory research assessment and training A more domain specific and nominalist understanding of creativity will free creativity researchers to make progress in areas where it is currently stymied

Academic writing in particular often poses a conflict of identity for students in higher education because the self which is inscribed in academic discourse feels alien to them. The main claim of this book is that writing is an act of identity in which people align themselves with socio culturally shaped subject positions and thereby play their part in reproducing or challenging dominant practices and discourses and the values beliefs and interests which they embody. The first part of the book reviews recent understandings of social identity of the discursal construction of identity of literacy and identity and of issues of identity in research on academic writing. The main part of the book is based on a collaborative research project about writing and identity with mature age students providing a case study of one writer's dilemmas over the presentation of self, a discussion of the way in which writers' life histories shape their presentation of self in writing, an interview based study of issues of ownership and of accommodation and resistance to conventions for the presentation of self, linguistic analysis of the ways in which multiple often contradictory interests values beliefs and practices are inscribed in discourse conventions which set up a range of possibilities for self hood for writers. The book ends with implications of the study for research on writing and identity and for the learning and teaching of academic writing. The book will be of interest to students and researchers in the fields of social identity literacy discourse analysis rhetoric and composition studies and to all those concerned to understand what is involved in academic writing in order to provide wider access to higher education.

Extending Intelligence Patrick C. Kyllonen, Richard D. Roberts, Lazar Stankov, 2008. This volume presents research from a variety of perspectives on the enhancement of human intelligence. It is organized around five themes: enhancement via instruction, enhancement via development over the life cycle, enhancement over time, enhancement via new constructs and new directions in enhancement. Three key issues are addressed. First, although most of the scientific research on intelligence has concerned what it is, this volume attends to the consequential societal and economic issue concerns of whether it can be increased and how. Second, intellectual enhancement is particularly important when targeted to minorities and the poor groups that have typically performed relatively less well on intelligence and achievement measures. This volume reflects the education community's ongoing interest in understanding and attempting to close achievement or test score gaps. Third, most of the attention to examining intellectual enhancement and in accounting for and closing the test score gap has focused on general cognitive ability. In line with the current emphasis on considering intelligence from a wider perspective, this volume includes constructs such as emotional and practical intelligence in definitions of intellectual functioning. Extending Intelligence: Enhancement and New Constructs is an essential volume for researchers, students and professionals in the fields of educational psychology, intelligence, educational measurement and assessment and critical thinking.
