

Clinical psychology notes

Clinical psychology – involves using clinical judgement to apply scientific knowledge from the discipline of clinical psychology in clinical practice with clients & patients.

What is a clinical psychologist:

- 1) A research-oriented scientist-practitioner – bound by quantitivism & rules – needs to be effective.
- 2) A practice-oriented practitioner scholar – more of a therapist – they're engaging/learning by doing = it's vocational.
- 3) A reflective practitioner – more of a counsellor type

What should a clinical psychologist do? – They're judged on what research they know, NOT what they do & how they apply it in a scientific manner.

- 1) Assessments – some questions / case notes / medical history / practitioner experience / opinions (following a consistent model of practice & formulating an opinion based on the assessment).
- 2) Diagnosis
- 3) Prescribe drugs – e.g. depression = anti-depressants.
- 4) Formulation – process of decision making – you create some kind of reasoning for why the person has that problem – from that reason, intervention = created
- 5) Interventions / therapy.

- ↳ Clinical judgement – developed through supervised clinical practice while undertaking professional training & accumulated clinical practice.
- ↳ Clinical practice – assessment, treatment & prevention of psychological problems.
- ↳ Scientific knowledge – developed through initial academic training, continual professional development (CPD) & training – read about research.

Handbook of Clinical Psychology in Medical Settings Ronald H. Rozensky, Jerry J. Sweet, Steven M. Tavian, 2013-06-29 For two decades I have been responding to questions about the nature of health psychology and how it differs from medical psychology behavioral medicine and clinical psychology From the beginning I have taken the position that any application of psychological theory or practice to problems and issues of the health system is health psychology I have repeatedly used an analogy to Newell and Simon s General Problem Solver program of the late 1950s and early 1960s which had two major functional parts in addition to the executive component One was the problem solving core the procedural competence the other was the representation of the problem environment In the analogy the concepts knowledge and techniques of psychology constitute the core competence the health system in all its complexity is the problem environment A health psychologist is one whose basic competence in psychology is augmented by a working knowledge of some aspect of the health system Quite apparently there are functionally distinct aspects of health psychology to the degree that there are meaningful subdivisions in psychological competence and significantly different microenvironments within the health system I hesitate to refer to them as areas of specialization as the man who gave health psychology its formal definition Joseph Matarazzo has said that there are no specialties in psychology cited in the editors preface to this book
