Financing Africa's Cities The Imperative Of Local Investment Author World Bank Jul 201:

Financing Africa's Cities Thierry Paulais, 2012-07-05 This volume addresses the issues of financing urban growth of the African continent which has the highest urban growth rate on the planet in the next decades Considerable investment will be needed to sustain this level of growth and to clear up accumulated backlogs At the same time decentralization has resulted in increased responsibilities for local government but in most cases institutional reforms were carried out without the transfer of a sufficient level of resources and local capacities in governance and project management are weak Which mechanisms will finance these extensive needs and how will African local governments meet these needs Specifics on how to finance African cities have not been studied The actual scale of this market has not been fully grasped A systemic approach to this market is difficult because of its diversity country size institutional context characteristics of urban network availability of capital market currency etc and a lack of data Donors assistance methods in the sector are disparate marked by disputes between different schools of thought special purpose vehicles created by donors operate according to a variety of methods and with wide ranging and sparsely disseminated results What is the best way to transform these systems often antiquated in many respects into modern financing systems that facilitate access to domestic markets mobilize local savings and reinforce local government autonomy There is no single answer to this question in regard to such a variety of institutional and economic contexts The main objective of the study is to clarify the debates and to enlighten the choices of African decision makers at local and national level The Advocate ,2001-08-14 The Advocate is a lesbian gay bisexual transgender LGBT monthly newsmagazine Established in 1967 it is the oldest continuing LGBT publication in the United States Working Mother ,2003-10 The magazine that helps career moms balance their personal and professional lives Africa's Cities Somik Vinay Lall, J. Vernon Henderson, Anthony J. Venables, 2017-02-09 Cities in Sub Saharan Africa are experiencing rapid population growth Yet their economic growth has not kept pace Why One factor might be low capital investment due in part to Africa's relative poverty Other regions have reached similar stages of urbanization at higher per capita GDP This study however identifies a deeper reason African cities are closed to the world Compared with other developing cities cities in Africa produce few goods and services for trade on regional and international markets To grow economically as they are growing in size Africa's cities must open their doors to the world They need to specialize in manufacturing along with other regionally and globally tradable goods and services And to attract global investment in tradables production cities must develop scale economies which are associated with successful urban economic development in other regions Such scale economies can arise in Africa and they will if city and country leaders make concerted efforts to bring agglomeration effects to urban areas Today potential urban investors and entrepreneurs look at Africa and see crowded disconnected and costly cities Such cities inspire low expectations for the scale of urban production and for returns on invested capital How can these cities become economically dense not merely crowded How can they acquire efficient connections And how can they draw firms and skilled workers with a more affordable livable urban environment From a policy standpoint the answer must be to address the structural problems affecting African cities Foremost among these problems are institutional and regulatory constraints that misallocate land and labor fragment physical development and limit productivity As long as African cities lack functioning land markets and regulations and early coordinated infrastructure investments they will remain local cities closed to regional and global markets trapped into producing only locally traded goods and services and limited in their economic growth

Africa's Cities Somik V. Lall,J. Lessons for the Urban Century Patricia Clarke Annez,Gwénaelle Huet,George E. Peterson,2008-01-01 The world s urban population doubled between 1970 and 2008 growing from 1.5 billion to 3 billion people Future world population growth will be concentrated in developing countries the majority in medium size and smaller cities and towns International institutions and governments alike face the challenge of efficiently financing the massive investment in infrastructure required to support this urban growth The Urban Infrastructure Fund UIF is a tool designed to meet this need Responsibility for subproject oversight credit assessment financial management reform and other critical tasks

Financing Africa Samuel Munzele Maimbo,Issa Faye,Thouraya Triki,2011-09-07 Financing Africa takes stock of Africa s financial systems in light of recent changes in the global financial system including the greater risk aversion of international investors a shift in economic and financial powers towards emerging markets and the regulatory reform debate and the increasing role of technology Using a wider and more detailed array of data than previous publications we observe a trend towards financial deepening more stability and more inclusion leading up to the crisis serious challenges however continue including limited access to financial services focus on short term contracts and hidden fragility related to weak regulatory frameworks undue government interference and governance deficiencies Our policy analysis therefore focuses on i expanding outreach ii fostering long term finance and iii improving regulation and supervision We identify the positive role of innovation and competition a stronger focus on non traditional financial service providers and more emphasis on demand side constraints as priority areas for policy actions Specifically competition from new players outside the banking system including telecomm companies can increase outreach with technological innovation that changes the economics of retail finance Moving beyond national stock exchanges that are not sustainable in most African countries towards regional solutions and over the counter trades can help foster long term finance as can addressing governance challenges in contractual savings institutions including life insurance companies and pension funds Finally there is a need to look beyond supply side constraints towards users of financial services focusing more on financial literacy of households and firms but also consumer protection In formulating policy messages we carefully distinguish between different country groupings differentiating among others between low and middle income and small and larger economies with a special focus on resource based economies and post conflict countries This book reaches out to both policy makers concerned about a more inclusive and effective financial system and other stakeholders including practitioners and development partners With this book we aim to contribute to the on going financial sector debate on Africa with the ultimate goal of faster economic development and poverty reduction Financing Sustainable Development in Africa

Uchenna R. Efobi, Simplicee Asongu, 2018-05-15 This edited volume provides a critical evaluation of financing options for sustainable development in Africa While sustainability has long been the watchword for development programs and while many African countries have taken initiatives to develop integrated frameworks that tackle developmental challenges including poverty education and health financing has remained a challenge In this book an expert team of chapter authors examines new financing options while also exploring how traditional financing means such as foreign aid and foreign direct investment can be more effective for sustainability The authors discuss how African nations can build adequate structures and productive capacity to create a platform that can meet present economic social and environmental needs without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs Practical case studies and scientific evidence give this book a unique approach that is both qualitative and quantitative This book will be of interest to students practitioners and scholars of development studies public policy and African economics The Search for the Key William Easterly, 2010 The traditional aid to investment to growth linkages are not very robust especially for African economies Aid does not necessarily finance investment and investment does not necessarily promote growth Differences in economic policy on the other hand can explain much of the difference in growth performances Furthermore domestic politics rather than aid or conditionality has been the main determinant of policy reform Where societies and governments have succeeded in putting growth enhancing policies into place aid has provided useful support The combination of good policies and aid has created a productive environment for private investment and growth Financing Cities ,2007 Presenting experiences from India China Brazil South Africa and Poland Financing Cities examines the need to boost infrastructure investment in cities as well as the need for prudent fiscal management across all levels of government This is discussed within the context of the decentralization of service delivery responsibilities Financing Cities ,2007 Presenting experiences from India China Brazil South Africa and Poland Financing Cities examines the need to boost infrastructure investment in cities as well as the need for prudent fiscal management across all levels of government This is discussed within the context of the decentralization of service delivery responsibilities
