perspectives in order to offer a valuable understanding of different stances that often arise when using this type of approach. A multidisciplinary team of authors enriches the diverse perspectives of this book with their international and cross cultural expertise. The intention is to share a deeper understanding of how this approach is applied to build collaborative relationships within an evaluation recognizing the level of collaboration will vary in each situation.

Second Language Interaction in Diverse Educational Contexts Kim McDonough, Alison Mackey, 2013. This volume brings together empirical research that explores interaction in a wide range of educational settings. It includes work that takes a cognitive brain based approach to studying interaction as well as studies that take a social contextual perspective. Interaction is defined quite broadly with many chapters focusing on oral interaction as is typical in the field while other chapters report work that involves interaction between learners and technology. Several studies describe the linguistic and discourse features of interaction between learners and their interlocutors but others demonstrate how interaction can serve other purposes such as to inform placement decisions. The chapters in the book collectively illustrate the diversity of contemporary approaches to interaction research investigating interactions with different interlocutors: learner-learner, learner-teacher in a variety of environments: classrooms, interactive testing environments, conversation groups and through different modalities: oral and written, face-to-face and technology mediated.

Comparing Communication Systems Klaus Bruhn Jensen, Rasmus Helles, 2022-11-29. Emphasizing the perspective of ordinary users, this book compares the uses of the internet in three centers of the global economy and world politics: China, Europe and the United States. It examines the internet as the current centerpiece of communication systems encompassing interpersonal communication, mass communication and social networking. The internet is unique as a medium in that it hosts both old media and new media. As such, it also integrates the prototypes of one-to-one interpersonal and one-to-many broadcast along with many-to-many social media and many-to-one surveillance communication. This book considers how all these media and communicative practices are embedded in social structures, cultural traditions and historical legacies of place. Comparing conditions in China, Europe and the United States, the chapters provide an overview of the distinctive regulatory regimes framing the internet and its local uses, the place of the internet in everyday life in each setting and how the internet serves as a resource for political, economic and cultural actions and interactions. Linking comparative analysis of media and social systems with ethnographic studies of internet usage on the ground, this book will be of particular interest to students and scholars working in global media, intercultural communication and internet studies.
