According to Kendra Cherry (2014) "...the child has become quite adept at doing things independently and is probably quite proud of such accomplishments." It is the stage wherein the child becomes more competent and confident. JM, from what we have observed is a friendly boy. He talks to everyone and he does not choose the person he wants to mingle with. He talks to whoever is beside him. He also mentioned that he likes sports- martial arts and basketball and because of these he is close to all boys. In these kinds of activities, the child will develop discipline and will also be able to interact with other children. In the article Social and Emotional Development in Middle Childhood, it states that the child gains mastery of many basic skills. It is a means in developing a sense of self-esteem. Friendship is important in this stage because it's where the children become more interested in building relationships and maintaining them.
