The above incident got off to a good start at the South County Thruway meeting, with members of both organizations there to see if they could find common ground. "I don't know if there was a deal," according to Joe, "but I hope so."

The important first factor, however, was the successful search for commonality, especially among those who didn't talk across the aisle. "I think that's the key," said Joe. "Without that, there's no deal."

Thruwaymen said they hope they'll be able to find common ground with the railroad men. "I think that's the key," said Joe. "Without that, there's no deal."
