Substantial Number of Black Children Outscore Whites

STOORIS, Conn. — The "Forgotten America" is in the process of becoming a reality, according to a study by the National Urban League. The study found that a substantial number of black children in the United States are performing better than white children on standardized tests. The study was conducted in 1972 and involved 10,000 children from 100 schools. The results showed that black children were more likely to be in the top 10 percent of their class than white children. This finding is significant because it challenges the common perception that black children are at a disadvantage in the classroom. The study also found that black children were more likely to be in the bottom 10 percent of their class than white children. This finding is also significant because it shows that there are still many black children who are struggling in school. The study is a reminder that we need to pay attention to the needs of all children, regardless of their race or ethnicity.
