Assessment of the fertilizer market and bulk procurement system in the United Republic of Tanzania Bumb, B. L., Ariga, J., Anand, M., Cameron, A. & Nkonya, N.M., 2021-04-19 The United Republic of Tanzania has a predominantly agricultural economy with agriculture accounting for more than two thirds of employment in rural areas and representing 30 percent of GDP Yet by global standards and even by the standards of Developing Countries crop yields in the country are low Using improved seeds and mineral fertilizers is therefore critical to promoting growth in crop productivity food production and sustaining the natural resource base especially among the smallholder farmers who subsist on nutrient poor soils In 2016 The Ministry of Agriculture Livestock and Fisheries MALF of the United Republic of Tanzania requested an assessment of the potential costs and benefits of a proposed Bulk Procurement System BPS for fertilizer imports that would consolidate international procurement to save costs ultimately improving the affordability for farmers This assessment was jointly carried out and submitted to MALF in 2017 by FAO and the International Fertilizer Development Centre IFDC and presents an analysis of the fertilizer market the proposed BPS policy and interviews with over one hundred public private and civil society stakeholders The findings indicate that the proposed system would likely not reduce prices for farmers and could negatively affect availability and market competition causing prices to increase in the long term The authors therefore recommend against its implementation pending further consultations or to pilot the system with careful review and evaluation The report also presents alternative policy options for the short and medium term to improve overall efficiency in the value chain and ultimately make fertilizer more affordable for Tanzanian smallholder farmers Zambia Christopher Adam, Paul Collier, Michael Gondwe, 2014-09-18 Zambia is a landlocked mineral dependent country in Southern Africa whose history is intimately entwined with the copper mining industry Having gained Independence from Britain in 1964 at the height of a copper boom the country experienced a slow and painful economic decline over the next quarter century However following a traumatic and protracted process of economic adjustment through the 1990s and early 2000s Zambia's economic potential is now better than it has been at any time since Independence This book which contains a set of rigorous but accessible essays by a range of Zambian and international scholars seeks to examine the challenges and opportunities that currently face Zambian policymakers as they seek to harness the country's valuable natural assets to broad based and sustainable economic growth over the coming decades Written in a non technical manner by leading scholars in the field the chapters address key challenges in the areas of natural resource management agriculture trade employment and migration education finance and investment This is the second volume in the Africa Policies for Prosperity series following on from the successful first volume on Kenya Report on Government Procurement Systems Peter K.
