

FINANCIAL Statements

INTRODUCTION

- Financial statements are the primary way to communicate results of operations, financial position, and cash flows to external parties.
- Additional to financial statements, financial statements include financial statement notes, supplemental information, and other disclosures.
- A full set of financial statements should show:
  - Financial position at the end of the period (balance sheet)
  - Earnings for the period (statement of income)
  - A comparison of income for the period (statement of comprehensive income)
  - Cash flows for the period (statement of cash flows)

- Dividends for and distributions to the owners during the period (statement of changes in equity).
- The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) is empowered by Congress to establish the principles for financial reporting.
  - SEC has delegated this authority to the Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB).
  - FASB establishes generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP).
  - GAAP is the acronym for generally accepted accounting principles.
  - GAAP must be followed to which a company distributes its financial statements to the investing public (external parties).

FINANCIAL STATEMENT PREPARATION

The accounting cycle ends with the preparation of financial statements.

- Information from the general ledger is used to prepare the financial statements.
- An accountant's evaluation is used to summarize account balances from the general ledger.
  - For various transactions with general ledger account codes in the first column followed by two columns of amounts.
- One debit and one credit column for each of the following:
  - Total Balance Contains each account's unadjusted balance.
  - Adjustments Contains adjusting entries.
  - Adjusted Trial Balance Contains the combination of the unadjusted balance and adjusting entries.
  - Income Statement Contains the adjusted balances for the revenue, expenses, gains, and loss accounts.
  - Balance Sheet Contains the adjusted balances for the assets, liabilities, and owner's equity accounts.

- Prepare an income statement.
  - First financial statement prepared.
- Prepare the statement of retained earnings.
  - Net income or loss has to be calculated before the statement of retained earnings can be prepared.
  - The statement of retained earnings shows the amount of profit retained by the company.
- Prepare the balance sheet.
  - Prepare the statement of cash flows.
  - Prepared last as it takes information from previous financial statements.

Statement of Income

- Also called the income statement, shows the:
  - Name of the entity (name of company or corporation).
  - Name of the statement (statement of income or income statement).
  - Span of time covered by the report (i.e., for the year ended December 31, 2013).
- Records how much income the company earned over a specific time period (usually for a year or some portion of a year).
- Shows the costs and expenses associated with earning that revenue (called the matching principle).
- Bottom line of the statement shows the company's net income or losses.
  - Net income or net loss shows how much the company earned or lost over the period.
  - In the case of a corporation, also shows Earnings Per Share (EPS).
    - EPS shows how much money shareholders would receive if the company decided to distribute all of the net earnings for the period on the basis of dividend.
- Shows the results of operations:
  - Net Income or Net Loss = Revenue - Expenses - Gains - Losses
- Revenue and expenses are the result of the company's major activities.
- Gains and losses are from other activities.

- Income or loss from discontinued operations and from extraordinary items are shown separately from income or loss from continuing operations.
  - A discontinued operation is a component of an entity that has been disposed of or is classified as held for sale.
  - Discontinued operations and cash flows either are or will be discontinued from the entity's operations.
  - An extraordinary item is both unusual and infrequent.
  - Extraordinary items happen infrequently, but have a major financial impact on the current year's operations.
  - Items are reported net of income tax.

Preparing an Income Statement

- Always start with sales (revenue).
- Subtract cost of goods sold (also called cost of sales) to arrive at gross profit.
  - Cost of goods sold includes the cost of the materials and the labor used in production.
- Subtract operating expenses.
  - Expenses that go into producing a company's operating income for a given period.
  - Includes salaries of administrative personnel and marketing and selling expenses.
  - Operating expenses are different from "costs of goods sold" because they cannot be linked directly to the production of the product or service or to the selling effort.
  - Expenses are also subtracted from gross profit to arrive at operating income.
    - Depreciation is a cost allocation of tangible property over its useful life.
    - Taxes are payment for the use and wear of assets, such as machinery, tools, and fixtures, which are used over long periods of time.
- Operating expenses are deducted from gross profit to arrive at operating income before income and income tax expenses (also called "income from operations").
- Add interest income and deduct interest expense to arrive at operating profit (before income tax).
- Deduct income tax to arrive at net income or net loss.

Income Statement Examples

- Magfly Inc. is grouping for all revenues and gains and another grouping for all expenses and losses.
- Present single-step income statement as one subtraction to arrive at net income.

Magfly Inc. Income Statement
For the year ended December 31, year 1

Multiple-Step Income Statement

- Operating revenues are shown separately from other revenues and gains.
- Operating expenses are shown separately from other expenses and losses.
- The matching of operating revenue and gains results in operating income.
- Distributions are subtracted by the use of many subtotals, such as:
  - Gross Profit = Net Sales - Cost of Goods Sold
  - Income from Operating Income = Gross Profit - Total Operating Expenses
  - Income Before Taxes = Income from Operating Income + Other Revenues and Gains - Other Expenses and Losses
  - Net Income = Income Before Taxes - Income Taxes
