Understanding Myths and Legends Karen Moncrieffe, 2015-12-03 Understanding Myths and Legends contains 27 stories from different countries around the World ranging from Perseus and Medusa from Ancient Greece to an Indian legend on how the Peacock got his glorious feathers. These exciting stories are full of fearsome monsters, brave heroes and magical happenings and will appeal to both girls and boys. Understanding Myths and Legends is a flexible resource that can be used to support topic work in history and RE or used as part of a unit of work in literacy. The stories and activities are ideal for use in guided reading sessions. To enable teachers to make the most of each story they are accompanied by background information to enable teachers to place the story confidently in context, differentiated reading tasks using a variety of question styles to help improve children's reading and comprehension skills, speaking and listening activities to deepen children's insight into the stories and encourage engagement, cross-curricular follow-up ideas enabling you to extend the story further. Myths and legends are not only excellent stories. They also help children to gain a true understanding of life in ancient times and improve their understanding of other people, cultures and places, making them an essential part of the primary curriculum.

Media, Culture and Human Violence Jeff Lewis, 2015-11-18 Humans of the advanced world are the most violent beings of all times. This violence is evident in the conditions of perpetual warfare and the accumulation of the most powerful and destructive arsenal ever known to humankind. It is also evident in the devastating impact of advanced world economy and cultural practices which have led to ecological devastation and the current era of mass species extinction, one of only six mass extinction events in planetary history and the only one caused by the actions of a single species, humans. This violence is manifest in our interpersonal relationships and the ways in which we organize ourselves through hierarchical systems that ensure the wealth and privilege of some against the penury and misery of others. In this new and highly original book, Jeff Lewis argues that violence is deeply inscribed in human culture, thinking and expressive systems. Media, Lewis contends, that violence is not an inescapable feature of an aggressive human nature. Rather, violence is laced through our desires and dispositions to communalism and expressive interaction. From the near extinction of all Homo sapiens around 74,000 years ago, the invention of culture and media enabled humans to imagine and articulate particular choices and pleasures. Organized intergroup violence or warfare emerged through the exercise of these choices and their expression through larger and increasingly complex human societies. This agitation of amplified desire, hierarchical social organization and mediated knowledge systems has created a cultural volition of violent complexity which continues into the present. Media, Culture and Human Violence examines the current conditions of conflict and harm as an expression of our violent complexity.

Language and Literacy Development in Early Childhood Robyn Ewing, Jon Callow, Kathleen Rushton, 2016-06-02 This book provides pre service and practising teachers with an integrated approach to language and literacy learning in early childhood. Written by leading academics in the field it explores how children learn to talk play using language become literate and make meaning from birth through to the pre school years. Emphasising the importance of imagination and the arts in language learning this book addresses a wide range of contemporary issues highlights the impact of diverse socioeconomic language and cultural backgrounds on young children's language and literacy development and shows how early childhood teachers can effectively partner with parents and caregivers to help children learn through and about language. Case studies interviews reflective questions clear links to the Early Years Learning Framework and the Australian Curriculum and a rich array of practical and creative activities for use in early childhood environments help students connect theory and current research to practice.
