Parra-Luna, 2009-10-30 The subject Systems sciences and cybernetics is the outcome of the convergence of a number of trends in a larger current of thought devoted to the growing complexity of primarily social objects and arising in response to the need for globalized treatment of such objects This has been magnified by the proliferation and publication of all manner of quantitative scientific data on such objects advances in the theories on their inter relations the enormous computational capacity provided by IT hardware and software and the critical revisiting of subject object interaction not to mention the urgent need to control the efficiency of complex systems where efficiency is understood to mean the ability to find a solution to many social problems including those posed on a planetary scale The result has been the forging of a new academically consolidated scientific trend going by the name of Systems Theory and Cybernetics with a comprehensive multi disciplinary focus and therefore apt for understanding realities still regarded to be inescapably chaotic This subject entry is subdivided into four sections The first an introduction to systemic theories addresses the historic development of the most commonly used systemic approaches from new concepts such as the so called geometry of thinking or the systemic treatment of non systemic identities to the taxonomic entropic axiological and ethical problems deriving from a general systemic cybernetic conceit Hence the focus in this section is on the historic and philosophical aspects of the subject Moreover it may be asserted today that beyond a shadow of a doubt problems in particular problems deriving from human interaction but in general any problem regardless of its nature must be posed from a systemic perspective for otherwise the obstacles to their solution are insurmountable Reaching such a perspective requires taking at least the following well known steps a statement of the problem from the determinant variables or phenomena b adoption of theoretical models showing the interrelationships among such variables c use of the maximum amount of wherever possible quantitative information available on each d placement of the set of variables in an environment that inevitably pre determines the problem That epistemology would explain the substantial development of the systemic cybernetic approach in recent decades The articles in the second section deal in particular with the different methodological approaches developed when confronting real problems from issues that affect humanity as a whole to minor but specific questions arising in human organizations Certain sub themes are discussed by the various authors always from a didactic vantage including problem discovery and diagnosis and development of the respective critical theory the design of ad hoc strategies and methodologies the implementation of both qualitative soft system methodologies and formal and quantitative such as the General System Problem Solver or the axiological operational perspective approaches cross disciplinary integration and suitable methods for broaching psychological cultural and socio political dynamisms The third section is devoted to cybernetics in the present dual meaning of the term on the one hand control of the effectiveness of communication and actions and on the other the processes of self production of knowledge through reflection and the relationship between the observing subject and the observed object when the latter is also observer and the former observed Known as second order cybernetics this provides an avenue for rethinking the validity of knowledge such as for instance when viewed through what is known as bipolar feedback processes through which interactions create novelty complexity and diversity Finally the fourth section centres around artificial and computational intelligence addressing sub themes such as neural networks the simulated annealing that ranges from statistical thermodynamics to combinatory problem solving such as in the explanation of the role of adaptive systems or when discussing the relationship between biological and computational intelligence

Education for Sustainable Development in the 'Capitalocene' Helena Pedersen, Sally Windsor, Benjamin Knutsson, Dawn Sanders, Arjen Wals, Olof Franck, 2023-09-25 The book seeks to explore ways in which education research policy and practice ought to be re thought and re enacted under present bio political predicaments It brings together scholars working in the intersections of education for sustainable development philosophy of education and curriculum theory who contribute original and radical analyses of education in an increasingly unpredictable and unintelligible world According to the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change IPCC humanity is closer to irreversible tipping points that once reached will lead to accelerating transformations that will drastically change life on earth during the coming decades Responses from education studies to these precarious social ecological conditions range from pointing out necessary ways forward for education grounded in human accountability responsibility justice ethics and care to dark ecology oriented interventions unnerving the very premises that education relies on When education is deeply entangled with and contributing to a catastrophic global development the idea of education as a nostalgic promise for a common good and a better future comes under scrutiny This volume re configures education as inextricable from other anthropogenic threats and natural forces that seem to become increasingly intertwined in joint production of our current predicament It urges educational theorists practitioners and policymakers to engage with thinking practicing and revolutionizing educational futures The chapters in this book were originally published in the journal Educational Philosophy and Theory
