The Drug Development Paradigm in Oncology National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Health and Medicine Division, Board on Health Care Services, National Cancer Policy Forum, 2018-03-12 Advances in cancer research have led to an improved understanding of the molecular mechanisms underpinning the development of cancer and how the immune system responds to cancer This influx of research has led to an increasing number and variety of therapies in the drug development pipeline including targeted therapies and associated biomarker tests that can select which patients are most likely to respond and immunotherapies that harness the body's immune system to destroy cancer cells Compared with standard chemotherapies these new cancer therapies may demonstrate evidence of benefit and clearer distinctions between efficacy and toxicity at an earlier stage of development However there is a concern that the traditional processes for cancer drug development evaluation and regulatory approval could impede or delay the use of these promising cancer treatments in clinical practice This has led to a number of efforts by patient advocates the pharmaceutical industry and the Food and Drug Administration FDA to accelerate the review of promising new cancer therapies especially for cancers that currently lack effective treatments However generating the necessary data to confirm safety and efficacy during expedited drug development programs can present a unique set of challenges and opportunities To explore this new landscape in cancer drug development the National Academies of Sciences Engineering and Medicine developed a workshop held in December 2016 This workshop convened cancer researchers patient advocates and representatives from industry academia and government to discuss challenges with traditional approaches to drug development opportunities to improve the efficiency of drug development and strategies to enhance the information available about a cancer therapy throughout its life cycle in order to improve its use in clinical practice This publication summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop

Molecular Targeting in Oncology Howard L. Kaufman, Scott Wadler, Karen Antman, 2007-12-26 This book presents an overview of the development of targeted therapies for the treatment of cancer with an emphasis on clinical application The volume covers the complexity of the rapidly developing area of targeted therapies for the treatment of patients with cancer It is structured in a way so readers may begin with chapters that most interest them and work through the rest of the chapters in the order of their choice Lecture Notes: Oncology Mark Bower,Jonathan

Waxman,2015-10-01 Cancer is one of the most exciting specialties in medicine This book aspires to convey the authors enthusiasm for oncology and this new edition of Oncology Lecture Notes is a must for students and trainees There has been a revolution in the practice of oncology The changes are due to amazing advances in basic science and the development of new drugs and successful immunisation programmes that have followed Cancer death rates have fallen and this is in part due to radical new treatments effective screening programmes and also as a result of popular movements for change in patient care and decreased exposure to carcinogens Completely revised and updated this new edition of Oncology Lecture Notes describes advances in molecular biology research and highlights the importance of patient perspectives in cancer care The text includes many new figures and tables an update of molecular biology and highlights new treatments With learning objectives and key point summaries in each chapter Oncology Lecture Notes is an ideal introduction to the biological basis and principles of treatment in oncology Includes a companion website at www.lecturenoteseries.com/oncology featuring cases and self assessment MCQs
