Thermal Energy
All the things around us are made of matter. Matter is made up of very small particles that you cannot see unless you are using a microscope. These particles are always moving. The energy of moving molecules is called thermal energy. The more thermal energy an object has, the faster the particles move. Thermal energy flows from objects to cool objects.

A small object, such as a leaf, is shown in the center of the page. The object is a small, dark, irregular shape, possibly a leaf or a piece of wood, with a small, light-colored, circular mark in the center. The object is surrounded by a large, light-colored, irregular shape, possibly a cloud or a piece of paper, which is also surrounded by a large, light-colored, irregular shape, possibly a cloud or a piece of paper. The entire scene is set against a dark background.
