Perspectives on Bias in Mental Testing Cecil Reynolds, 2013-11-11 The cultural test bias hypothesis is one of the most important scientific questions facing psychology today Briefly the cultural test bias hypothesis contends that all observed group differences in mental test scores are due to a built in cultural bias of the tests themselves that is group score differences are an artifact of current psychometric methodology If the cultural test bias hypothesis is ultimately shown to be correct then the 100 years or so of psychological research on human differences or differential psychology the scientific discipline underlying all applied areas of human psychology including clinical counseling school and industrial psychology must be reexamined and perhaps dismissed as confounded contaminated or otherwise artifactual In order to continue its existence as a scientific discipline psychology must confront the cultural test bias hypothesis from the solid foundations of data and theory and must not allow the resolution of this issue to occur solely within and to be determined by the political Zeitgeist of the times or any singular work no matter how comprehensive In his recent volume Bias in Mental Testing New York Free Press 1980 Arthur Jensen provided a thorough review of most of the empirical research relevant to the evaluation of cultural bias in psychological and educational tests that was available at the time that his book was prepared Nevertheless Jensen presented only one perspective on those issues in a volume intended not only for the scientific community but for intelligent laypeople as well

Geriatrics 1 D. Platt,2012-12-06 In 1909 a short contribution entitled Geriatrics was published in the New York Medical Journal According to this article old age represents a distinct period of life in which the physiologic changes caused by aging are accompanied by an increasing number of pathologic changes We now know that the organs of the body age neither at the same rate nor to the same extent and that physiologic alterations are indeed superimposed by pathologic changes as a result of the latter phenomenon the origins and course of illnesses in the elderly can present unusual characteristics The frequency of concurrent disorders in the elderly entails the danger of polypharmaco therapy i e the use of various drugs to combat various disorders while neglecting the possibly adverse combined effects of these drugs To obviate this danger special knowledge in the field of geriatrics the medical branch of gerontology is necessary Geriatrics is constantly increasing in importance owing to the near doubling of life expectancy over the past 130 years and to the improved diagnostic and therapeutic techniques made available by medical progress The rapid recent development of experimental gerontology has played an essential role in enabling us to understand the special features of geriatrics This progress has however been accompanied by such a vast increase in the volume of literature on the subject that specialists in the field can scarcely maintain an overall perspective of new publications The German Journal of Psychology ,1982
