Commodifying Bodies Nancy Scheper-Hughes, Loic Wacquant, 2002-10-10 Increasingly the body is a possession that does not belong to us It is bought and sold bartered and stolen marketed wholesale or in parts The professions especially reproductive medicine transplant surgery and bioethics but also journalism and other cultural specialists have been pliant partners in this accelerating commodification of live and dead human organisms Under the guise of healing or research they have contributed to a new ethic of parts for which the divisible body is severed from the self torn from the social fabric and thrust into commercial transactions as organs secretions reproductive capacities and tissues responding to the dictates of an incipiently global marketplace Breaking with established approaches which prioritize the body as text the chapters in this book examine not only images of the body turned merchandise but actually existing organisms considered at once as material entities semi magical tokens symbolic vectors and founts of lived experience The topics covered range from the cultural disposal and media treatment of corpses the biopolitics of cells sperm banks and eugenics to the international trafficking of kidneys the development of transplant tourism to the idioms of corporeal exploitation among prizefighters as a limiting case of fleshly commodity This insightful and arresting volume combines perspectives from anthropology law medicine and sociology to offer compelling analyses of the concrete ways in which the body is made into a commodity and how its marketization in turn remakes social relations and cultural meanings

Commodifying Bodies Nancy Scheper-Hughes, Loic Wacquant, 2002-10-18 With rapid developments in reproductive medicine transplant ethics and bioethics a new ethic of parts has emerged in which the body is increasingly seen as a commodity which can be bartered sold or stolen This book combines perspectives from anthropology and sociology to offer compelling new readings of the body

Commodified Bodies Oliver Decker, 2014-04-24 Commodified Bodies examines the social practice of organ transplantation and trafficking and scrutinises the increasingly neoliberal tendencies in the medical system It analyses phenomena such as the denomination of human body parts as raw materials and commodities or the arguments used by the proponents for a free market solution Moreover it argues that modern medicine is still linked with its religious roots The commodification of body parts is seen not as an imperialistic act of the market but as the end of a historical process as the notion of fetishism links the market with the body Marx's concept of commodity fetishism and Sigmund Freud's theory of the perverted use of objects are modified and adapted to the reconstruction of the joint beginnings of market and medicine these countries have begun to market and brand their resources using methods and practices drawn from the commercial sector Tupasela identifies changes during the past ten years that suggest that state collected and maintained resources have become the object of valuation practices Tupasela argues that this phenomenon constitutes a novel form of nation branding in which relations between the states individuals and the private sector are re aligned The author locates the historical underpinnings of population branding in the field of medical genetics starting in the early 1960s but transforming significantly during the 2010s into a professional marketing activity undertaken at multiple levels and sites In studying this recent phenomenon Tupasela provides examples of how marketing material has become increasingly professional and targeted towards a broader audience including the public The book will be of particular interest to scholars of critical data studies and nation branding as well as students of science and technology studies sociology and marketing The
