Installation and Operating Instructions

For Use By Qualified Service Technician Only

DESCRIPTION

"CRD" burners feature a combustion head incorporating a design concept which provides a means to control the air pattern to match the nozzle requirements. The air velocity, namely for optimum combustion are easily adjusted, or nozzle size without changing the air handling hardware. The flame front is isolated inside the air tube so that no air recirculating gases from the main chamber area can quench the flame at the retention line.

The letters "CRD" stand for "Controlled Retention Double Speed" Carlin Models 701CRD and 801CRD for use with no. 2 fuel oil or kerosene-high low output (step modulating) high speed flame retention burners. If flow rate is step modulated by use of two oil valves and two nozzles. Combustion air is controlled by a damper valve for lift and switch engages the second stage valve as the air shutter approaches a wide open position.

Due to the low high-low feature of these burners they are very versatile and efficient.

1. They can operate in forced draft boilers or furnaces at pressures up to 50 inches w.c.
2. They will save typical 20% in seasonal fuel consumption compared to conventional single stage flame retention burner.
3. They can operate with or without reactor lined combustion chambers.
4. They are superior for process applications.
5. They can be installed through the door opening.
