Virtual Training: Carpenters Union Incorporates Innovative Education Tool to Prep Students for Crucial Welding Skills and Certification

While, to many, it might seem that welding and carpentry wouldn't go hand in hand – in reality, union carpenters need to have welding certifications in their skillset. From form systems and interior systems to pile driving and more, welding – and the related training needed for certification – plays an integral role in the carpentry field.

"Because the focus of the carpentry union is to provide the highest trained, most efficient workforce available, each man and woman has to be able to handle the tasks required for each job," says Joe Weising, education administrator at the Southeast Wisconsin Carpentry Training Center in Pewaukee, Wisc., affiliated with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters (UBC), one of the nation's largest trade unions.

"Welding is a strong component of that job," Weising continues. "We need to have a portable work force. If I'm overseeing a project, and I have a carpenter coming in to build a steel stud wall, why would I wait to call in someone else to do the welding? The UBC strives to provide value to the employer by delivering skilled workers who do what it takes to get the job done and get it done efficiently."

With this in mind, it's no surprise those in the carpentry industry are taking a hard look at training programs at the apprentice and journeyman levels, as well as programs that provide ongoing skills refreshers and certifications for master carpenters at the professional union level.

The UBC takes training seriously and is seeking to deliver a skilled, productive workforce each day to construction sites nationwide. The organization provides training not only at its International Training Center in Las Vegas but also through 140 regional training centers across the country.

At the Southeast Wisconsin Carpentry Training Center, aspiring carpenters receive the necessary training for careers in carpentry, cabinet making, millwrighting, floor covering, interior systems and pile driving. The committee that oversees the center's training program consists of a partnership of unionized building contractors and the Chicago Region Council of Carpenters – under the direction of President, Frank Libby. The alliance was responsible for the establishment of the training center and now administers the various apprenticeship programs in accordance with state apprenticeship guidelines.

"The center provides the necessary proficiency, knowledge and hands-on involvement required to launch a carpentry career," Weising notes. "We offer in-depth classroom instruction from skilled professionals using up-to-date training materials, providing a single source to prepare people who form the core of our industry."

Jason Schmidt, Senior Customer Training Instructor, Lincoln Electric, provides hands-on training to a group of apprentice and journeyman pile drivers.

"The center provides the necessary proficiency, knowledge and hands-on involvement required to launch a carpentry career," Weising notes.
