PLAYING DEAD SPACE 2

HUD

Dead Space 2 does not utilize a traditional heads up display to deliver vital information. Rather than meters or ammo counts, all of the information you need to know is displayed on screen via a variety of in-game indicators.

Foremost amongst the indicators is Isaac's Red. The Red is a part of Isaac's suit and provides valuable data on his progress. At the end of the game, when Isaac's Red is at its lowest, you are in the Red. As the Red is at its lowest, you are in the Red. You can see the Red's status in the Red and see a red glow in your journal. If it's too late, the Red's right shoulder is your current status change. As you see the Red, this change decreases. Recharge it with the Red's Red. Isaac will also see the Red's status change.

Your armor is displayed on top of your currently equipped weapon when aiming. When the counter turns orange, you are running low on armor and should reload. When the counter turns red, your clip is empty and you must reload. Isaac will reload automatically if he has another clip for that weapon. When there are no more clips on the top and bottom of the counter, it means you have no more clips in your inventory.

RIG

Activate the RIG (Remote Inventory System) to view an in-depth report on your progress and status. You can access the Inventory, Mission, and Database sub-menus from the Red.

INVENTORY

View your current status, number of kills, and credits from the Inventory. You can view your statistics or drop items from this menu, as well. Dropped items will appear in the world and can be picked up again if needed.

MISSION

View your current objectives and personal journal. Completed objectives are highlighted in green, while incomplete ones remain blue. Highlight an objective to view further details, when available.

DATABASE

Click on the audio and video transmissions you have picked up over the course of the game, sorted by chapter.
