Far Beyond The Field:

Far Beyond the Field Makoto Ueda, 2003-03-17 Far Beyond the Field is a first of its kind anthology of haiku by Japanese women collecting translations of four hundred haiku written by twenty poets from the seventeenth century to the present. By arranging the poems chronologically, Makoto Ueda has created an overview of the way in which this enigmatic seventeen syllable form has been used and experimented with during different eras. At the same time, the reader is admitted to the often marginalized world of female experience in Japan, revealing voices every bit as rich and colorful and perhaps even more lyrical and erotic than those found in male haiku. Listen for instance to Chiyojo who worked in what has been long thought of as the dark age of haiku during the eighteenth century but who composed exquisitely fine poems tracing the smallest workings of nature. Or Katsuro Nobuko who wrote powerfully erotic poems when she was widowed after only two years of marriage. And here too is a voice from today, Mayuzumi Madoka, whose meditations on romantic love represent a fresh new approach to haiku.

Phantoms of the Clinic Mikita Brottman, 2018-05-08 As Freud predicted, there has always been great anxiety about the place of psychoanalysis in contemporary life, particularly in relation to its ambiguous and complicated relationship to the realm of science. There is also a long history of widespread resistance in both academia and medicine to anything associated with the world of the supernatural; very few people in their professional lives at least are willing to admit a serious interest in occult phenomena. As a result, paranormal traces have all but vanished from the psychoanalytic process, though not without leaving a residue. This residue remains, the author argues, in the acceptably clinical guise of projective identification, a concept first formulated by Melanie Klein and widely used in contemporary psychoanalysis to suggest a different variety of transference and transference-like phenomena between patient and analyst that seem to occur outside the normal range of the sensory process.

Strings, Conformal Fields, and Topology Michio Kaku, 2012-12-06 Following on the foundations laid in his earlier book Introduction to Superstrings, Professor Kaku discusses such topics as the classification of conformal string theories, the non-polynomial closed string field theory matrix models, and topological field theory. The presentation of the material is self-contained, and several chapters review material expounded in the earlier book. This book provides students with an understanding of the main areas of current progress in string theory, placing the reader at the forefront of current research.
