

An illustration of a meeting scene. In the foreground, a long wooden table is partially visible. On the left, a man with a white beard and grey hair, wearing a maroon sweater and teal pants, sits in a white office chair with his arms crossed. On the right, a man with brown hair and glasses, wearing a brown sweater and red pants, sits in a similar white office chair, writing on a notepad. Behind the table, three other people are visible: a woman with red hair and glasses in a purple blazer, a woman in a red dress, and a man in a light blue shirt. In the background, there is a large screen displaying two charts: a pie chart on the left and a bar chart on the right. The text 'DESIGNING TRAINING PROGRAM' is overlaid in the center in a large, bold, dark blue font.

Advanced Design John Reis,2022-04-17 This book is about design Everybody does design from artists to engineers from interior designers to industrial designers We design our days and we design our lives This book presents the three universal activities that everyone uses no matter who they are or what they do These three activities are 1 clarify an ambiguous project 2 generate ideas and 3 select one idea for implementation This book also presents how the psychology of design impacts our effectiveness with each of these three activities from creativity through decision making intuition through analysis and cognitive enhancement through design biases Although the examples provided in this book primarily target the diverse disciplines of art painting and engineering they can be easily understood and adapted by designers in any discipline This book helps advanced design students and working professionals in any discipline to understand why and when the basic design principles they were taught work or do not work and as a result improve their design effectiveness
