Modeling Users' Experiences with Interactive Systems Evangelos Karapanos, 2012-08-09 Over the past decade the field of Human Computer Interaction has evolved from the study of the usability of interactive products towards a more holistic understanding of how they may mediate desired human experiences. This book identifies the notion of diversity in users' experiences with interactive products and proposes methods and tools for modeling this along two levels: a) interpersonal diversity in users' responses to early conceptual designs and b) the dynamics of users' experiences over time. The Repertory Grid Technique is proposed as an alternative to standardized psychometric scales for modeling interpersonal diversity in users' responses to early concepts in the design process and new Multi Dimensional Scaling procedures are introduced for modeling such complex quantitative data. iScale a tool for the retrospective assessment of users' experiences over time is proposed as an alternative to longitudinal field studies and a semi automated technique for the analysis of the elicited experience narratives is introduced. Through these two methodological contributions this book argues against averaging in the subjective evaluation of interactive products. It proposes the development of interactive tools that can assist designers in moving across multiple levels of abstraction of empirical data as design relevant knowledge might be found on all these levels. Foreword by Jean Bernard Martens and Closing Note by Marc Hassenzahl.

Biographical Research Ana Caetano, Magda Nico, 2022-03-30 Studying people's lives requires acknowledging the multiple entanglements between individual singularity and processes of social patterning. This volume reveals the potential of biographical research in the production of social theory in the development of methodological innovation in giving voice and protagonism to people and in the understanding of the social unfolding of their lives It is a testimony of a vibrant and youthful field with a long tradition in social sciences and with numerous connections with other study areas namely the life course approach The different chapters illustrate how the challenges posed by this type of research focused on the individual level of analysis are particular and what creative responses are required to continue analysing the link between biography and society The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of the journal Contemporary Social Science Handbook of Life-Span Development Karen L. The Overworked Consumer Christopher K. Andrews, 2018-12-11 The Overworked Consumer examines how the growing use of self service technology in the U S economy has contributed to Americans feelings of busyness and overwork by asking them to perform a variety of tasks in work like settings for free Focusing on the adoption of self checkout lanes in the retail food industry the book describes how self service technology is changing the meaning of service in an economy where the boundaries between work and leisure are becoming increasingly blurred Are big businesses simply being cheap and lazy preferring to automate and outsource work to unpaid consumers instead of raising wages or is self service and its do it yourself ethos a response to consumers demands for faster easier ways of buying goods and services And what exactly are shoppers getting when they go through the self checkout lane Is it really faster than the cashier lane or just another illusory speed up meant to distract them from the realization that they are performing unpaid work unwitting participants in a new retail experiment whose roots can be traced back to the very invention of the modern supermarket And what about the effect on jobs is this the end of the checkout line for cashiers and similar forms of work or are such anxieties over automation overstated To answer these questions the author takes readers inside SuperFood a regional supermarket chain drawing upon extensive interviews with managers staff and customers as well as an array of examples retail studies and statistics to separate fact from fiction and figure out what is actually happening in stores Concluding with a cautionary tale of two grocers the author suggests the future of retailing is still undetermined meaning shoppers still have time to decide whether or not they really want to do it yourself Caveat emptor
