Cholesterol Wes Tolbert, 2015-12-18 Are you looking for ways to improve your health? Have you heard the old "your cholesterol is too high" line, but you don't understand what it really means? Cholesterol is one of the modified sterols which is present in every single cell membrane of our body. Not only does our body intake cholesterol from various food sources, but our body produces cholesterol also. Almost all of our body cells and liver is a major source of production of natural cholesterol. Cholesterol is not generally considered good for health; actually, it is represented through various media and health experts as a major causing factor of various blood and heart diseases. But if you ask the person with expert knowledge about natural body antioxidants, they might surprise you with a new perspective about cholesterol. Cholesterol helps in the maintenance of our cell structure. In order to complete all basic and crucial body functions, cholesterol is required, and that is why the body produces it as an essential factor to carry out our routine body tasks.
