Diagnosis and Treatment of Cancer using Thermal Therapies Citlalli J. Trujillo Romero, Dora-Luz Flores, 2023-10-06 New research is being conducted in the diagnosis and new treatments of cancer that has high efficacy and are minimally invasive Artificial intelligence bioimpedance thermal images and nanomaterials have been used to provide early diagnosis New treatments based on the generation of microwaves radiofrequency or ultrasound have been proposed in the last couple of decades Although thermotherapies have been shown to be efficient for them to be considered as a primary treatment they must overcome some hurdles One of the main challenges is to ensure applicators that point the electromagnetic or the mechanical waves at a tumor don't affect the surrounding healthy tissues In some cases nanoparticles have also been designed to achieve better focus The design of new applicators can be made by computational models based on methods such as the finite element However to efficiently predict the applicator's performance it is important that dielectric thermal and acoustic properties tissue characterization are included in the models Not only healthy tissue but also tumors must be characterized Patient specific treatment planning which consists of a 3D patient model based on medical images can be developed to implement a safety treatment Moreover tissue properties as well as the applicator must be defined Parameters such as temperature increase and heat pattern must be evaluated to ensure patient safety and treatment success

Developing Biomarker-Based Tools for Cancer Screening, Diagnosis, and Treatment Institute of Medicine, National Cancer Policy Forum, 2006-11-18 Research has long sought to identify biomarkers that could detect cancer at an early stage or predict the optimal cancer therapy for specific patients Fueling interest in this research are recent technological advances in genomics proteomics and metabolomics that can enable researchers to capture the molecular fingerprints of specific cancers and fine tune their classification according to the molecular defects they harbor The discovery and development of new markers of cancer could potentially improve cancer screening diagnosis and treatment Given the potential impact cancer biomarkers could have on the cost effectiveness of cancer detection and treatment they could profoundly alter the economic burden of cancer as well Despite the promise of cancer biomarkers few biomarker based cancer tests have entered the market and the translation of research findings on cancer biomarkers into clinically useful tests seems to be lagging This is perhaps not surprising given the technical financial regulatory and social challenges linked to the discovery development validation and incorporation of biomarker tests into clinical practice To explore those challenges and ways to overcome them the National Cancer Policy Forum held the conference Developing Biomarker Based Tools for Cancer Screening Diagnosis and Treatment The State of the Science Evaluation Implementation and Economics in Washington D C from March 20 to 22 2006 At this conference experts gave presentations in one of six sessions In addition seven small group discussions explored the policy implications surrounding biomarker development and adoption into clinical practice Developing Biomarker based Tools for Developing Cancer Screening Diagnosis and Treatment The State of the Science Evaluation Implementation and Economics Workshop Summary presents the conference proceedings and will be used by an Institute of Medicine IOM committee to develop consensus based recommendations for moving the field of cancer biomarkers forward
