Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The subjects were 15 sedentary, middle-aged women (mean age 45.8 ± 3.2 years, range 35–55 years). The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group (n = 7) and a training group (n = 8). The control group remained sedentary throughout the study. The training group participated in a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The training program was designed to increase the subjects' aerobic capacity and endurance. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during a submaximal exercise test at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The results showed that the training group had a significant decrease in HR at rest and during the exercise test, and a significant increase in EE at rest and during the exercise test, compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.
