An Assessment of Cameroons Wind and Solar Energy Potential: A Guide for a Sustainable Economic Development Bobbo Nfor Tansi, 2012 Cameroon has vast renewable energy resource potentials with a hydropower potential of about 55 200MW second only to the Democratic Republic of Congo in Africa So far its energy needs are met by 4 8% hydropower which accounts for less than 5% of its total hydropower potential 0% wind and 0% solar Cameroons energy sector still goes through insufficient electrical energy production especially during the heart of the dry season which runs from December through March Coincidentally the wind and solar power potentials for Cameroon are at their peak during these months and could conveniently supplement for the shortfalls in generation during these periods In this research technical analyses were carried out to determine the wind and solar energy resource potentials for Cameroon using the RETScreen software tool provided by CANMET Canada These analysis revealed that the northern regions of Cameroon had higher wind and solar resource potentials than any other location in Cameroon A 2MW installed wind energy capacity would be capable of generating well over 1 5GWh electrical energy per year while a 2KW installed solar energy capacity will be capable of generating well over 3MWh electrical energy per year In the final sections financial analysis were carried out to determine the economic viability of such projects and the possibility for self financing Emission analyses were also done based on the ability for such projects to offset greenhouse gas emissions and ensure sustainability in the energy sector The analysis for Maroua revealed that 78 6tCO₂ yr for wind and 0 1tCO₂ yr for solar could be reduced by those installations Finally the legislations and legal frameworks governing the energy sector in Cameroon were dissected to determine possible weaknesses and constraints limiting the use promotion and development of the full potential of Cameroon s renewable energy resources
