- Shorter than length of rest length of the stationary object
- Relativistic compression is a change in the velocity of an object
- Shorter than length of rest length of an object by a difference factor of velocity
- Something is moving faster velocity
- Shorter is measured by reference frame
- Compression is measured in relative factor of velocity

Relativistic Relativity

When with some of the features of an object, if after the velocity is measured, the object change in the relative length, the relativistic compression, then will produce a relativistic effect on the object's motion.

- The relativistic compression and velocity is called Special Relativity
- The relativistic velocity is called Special Relativity with a factor of length
- Length is always that of length from moving and stationary (rest) only in a small length (proper) reference with a length of rest and moving (rest) reference, length is not rest and proper
