How it works

The endocrine system works with the nervous system to control and regulate cellular activities in the body and hormones.

- Endocrine glands release hormones into the bloodstream to regulate cellular activities throughout the body.

- Each hormone has a specific function in the body and has a specific target cell to which it binds to exert its effect on the cell.

- Each hormone specifically binds to a target cell.

- A target cell has receptors on their cell membrane designed to respond to that specific hormone.

- When the hormone binds to its receptor, the receptor sends a signal to the cell's nucleus to activate or deactivate a specific gene.

- After the hormone binds to the cell receptor, a chemical chain of events occurs, leading to a metabolic response.

Effectors are cells, organs or glands that respond to a hormone, producing a response.

ENDOCRINE VS. EXOCRINE GLANDS

Endocrine glands release hormones into the bloodstream to regulate cellular activities throughout the body.

Exocrine glands release substances into the body through a duct. Examples include sweat glands, salivary glands, and the digestive system.
