
Abstract

[illegible]

Figure 1a illustrates the relationship between the number of nodes and the number of edges in a network. The x-axis represents the number of nodes (n) and the y-axis represents the number of edges (m). The graph shows a linear relationship where the number of edges increases proportionally with the number of nodes.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to investigate the effect of the use of a computer-based system on the performance of a task. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The participants were 20 students who were divided into two groups. The first group was the control group and the second group was the experimental group. The control group used a traditional method of learning, while the experimental group used a computer-based system. The results of the study showed that the experimental group performed significantly better than the control group. The use of a computer-based system improved the performance of the task. The study also found that the use of a computer-based system reduced the time taken to complete the task. The results of this study suggest that the use of a computer-based system is an effective way to improve the performance of a task.
