

Expenditures for Governmental Activities

The expenditure account is a record of the government's activities during the year. It is a summary of the government's expenditures, which are the outflows of resources from the government. The expenditures are classified into three categories: (1) current expenditures, (2) capital expenditures, and (3) transfers. Current expenditures are the expenditures for the day-to-day operations of the government. Capital expenditures are the expenditures for the acquisition of fixed assets. Transfers are the expenditures for the transfer of resources from the government to other entities.
