

If crankcase breather opening or PCV valve is plugged with dirt and oil accumulation, remove and clean with an approved solvent or replace, as required.

5. Gasoline engines only. Check choke control and linkage to carburetor to be sure it fully closes and opens the choke.

6. Check coil polarity to be sure that primary wire from point-type distributors is connected to negative terminal on coil (black wire to coil, white wire to 12 volts at bottom of ballast resistor). Note - On electronic ignition systems there are two wires coming from the distributor and both are connected to the coil. D176GA engine coil does not have external ballast resistor.

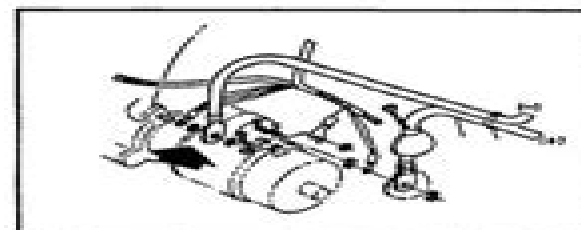

CAUTION

For safety when checking or removing battery connections, always first disconnect the negative battery cable at the engine ground connection.

7. Check battery for damage and cleanliness of terminals. Remove the boot covers to expose terminal connections. Clean battery terminals and cable connections if they are dirty and corroded. Check battery terminal cable connections for tightness. Replace boots over terminals after inspection. If necessary, wash battery with a mild solution of baking soda and water. First, make sure that cell vent caps are tight to ensure that soda solution does not contaminate battery electrolyte.

NOTICE - For side-mounted terminals, each battery cable is attached to terminal by a bolt which threads into the terminal. When tightening the bolt, use recommended torque value to prevent terminal damage, while assuring a good connection. Do not overtighten.

8. Be sure battery negative (ground) cable is securely connected to engine block. Check engine starter cable connections.
