D. Wire Identification and Numbering.

- (1) In each electrical and electronic wiring circuit, the wires are identified by a number-letter code called a wire number. The wire number is either printed, stenciled or labeled on each wire segment. A wire segment is a run of wire between two points in a circuit. The wire number explains where the wire is used and gives the wire gage. Refer to Figure 2 for an example of the wire identification and numbering system.

 A numerical sequence for each type of wire (SP1, SP2, SP3, ST1, ST2, ST3) on a wire diagram page may be used to identify wires within a shield or twisted group when they are not drawn adjacent and enclosed by a twisted or shielded symbol. Example: SP2-B and SP2-W are the two wires within a shield.
