Teaching EFL Online Andrew R. Webster, 2012 This work explores the role of the e moderator taking account of the skills required and the processes involved in creating and teaching an online English as a Foreign Language EFL course It also details those theories which are applicable to online learning and how they are represented through various models thus creating a framework to assist the e moderation process In particular Salmon s five stage model 2004 is analysed to assess its effectiveness in helping to prepare a new e moderator to teach in an online environment Qualitative self study research is conducted involving an analysis of the e moderator s reflective journal This method can be particularly insightful uncovering the e moderator s beliefs perceptions and challenges encountered throughout the process Thus in depth data is collected and used in evaluating an approach to e moderation It reveals how Salmon s five stage model and others can be considerably helpful although not sufficient in themselves for successful online teaching and learning In this regard a critical appraisal and detailed analysis of Salmon s model relating to this research is conducted to assess the skills required to become a successful e moderator This research reveals not only the complexities problems responsibilities and challenges encountered but also the tremendous rewards that can be reaped from the e moderation process Such research can encouragingly provide other practitioners with a valuable insight into the process and leads to recommendations for further research In conclusion it is apparent that systematic frameworks such as Salmon s five stage model can be extremely useful for effective scaffolding but on their own they are not sufficient to produce a successful e moderation process It is suggested therefore that additional support and continual encouragement should be provided to motivate and engage students in both synchronous and asynchronous interactions Moreover consideration
