STEM is a new offering in U. S. schools. It is the integration of Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics into an interdisciplinary subject in schools. STEM education offers a chance for students to make sense of the world rather than learn isolated bits and pieces of phenomena.

"For a society so deeply dependent on technology and engineering, we are largely ignorant about technology and engineering concepts and processes, and the United States has largely ignored this incongruity in our educational system." (Bybee, 2000)

The national Science Board in 2008 reported that the U. S. is currently experiencing a chronic decline in homegrown STEM talent and is increasingly dependent upon foreign scholars to fill the workforce. Currently there are no integrated STEM Standards. However, many of the Common Core Standards have multiple applications to STEM subjects and activities. Some selected examples are:

- Anchor Standard-Writing: Produce clear and coherent writing in which the development, organization and style are appropriate to task, purpose and audience.
- Anchor Standard-Writing: Use technology, including the Internet, to produce and publish writing and to interact and collaborate with others.
- Anchor Standard-Writing: Write informative/explanatory texts to examine and convey ideas and information clearly and accurately through effective selection, organization and analysis of content.
- Anchor Standard-Writing: Draw evidence from literary or informational texts to support analysis, reflection and research.
- Anchor Standard--Speaking and Listening: Prepare for and participate effectively in a range of conversations and collaborations with diverse partners, building on others' ideas and expressing one's own clearly and persuasively.
- Anchor Standard--Speaking and Listening: Integrate and evaluate information presented in diverse media and formats, including visually, quantitatively, as well as orally.
- Anchor Standard--Reading: Integrate and evaluate content presented in diverse formats and media, including visually and quantitatively as well as in words.
- Reading Standards for Literacy--Science/Technical: Evaluate the hypotheses, data, analysis, and conclusions in a science or technical text, verifying the data when possible and corroborating or challenging conclusions with other sources of information.
- Reading Standards for Literacy--Science/Technical: Synthesize information from a range of sources (e.g., texts, experiments, simulations) into a coherent understanding of a process, phenomenon, or concept, resolving conflicting information when possible.
- Standards for Mathematical Practice: Construct viable arguments and critique the reasoning of others.
- Standards for Mathematical Practice: Use appropriate tools strategically.
- Standards for Mathematical Practice: Make sense of problems and persevere in solving them.
